

U.S. MAY ARM ITS SHIPS, ROOSEVELT SAYS

Knox Calls for Immediate Repeal of Neutrality Act

Use of American Army Where and When It Is Needed Is Advocated

Navy Secretary Delivers 'Fighting' Speech at Launching of New $70,000,000 Battleship; Says Time Is Past To Play With Laws which Cripple Us in Aiding Nations Who Are Fighting Hitler

QUINCY, Mass., Sept. 23. (AP)—Use of the United States Army "where it is needed and when it is needed," together with immediate repeal of the Neutrality act, were urged today by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox in a fighting speech delivered after the launching of the 35,000-ton battleship Massachusetts.

Speaking extemporaneously, Knox asserted that "we must have some type of thinking that argues that our army must be reorganized in its action in defending America."

50,000 Persons Present

The navy secretary did not elaborate on his reference to the army except to say that it was the "very essence of national defense" to use the army where needed and that it was "foolish thinking" to regard our safety as only directly concerned when an enemy puts a foot on our soil.

A throng of more than 50,000 persons watched the $70,000,000 battleship slide down the ways of the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Steel Company. Many of them heard Knox shout through a loud speaker system that the huge battleship and five similar ships already built or building would carry the "heaviest guns afloat."

Only a comparative few nearest the launching site, however, were able to watch naval history made. As the Massachusetts slid down the ways a huge overhead crane started to lay the keel of a new cruiser, the U.S.S. Flint. The flaring bow of the battleship had not yet reached the water when the first steel sections of the new keel were placed in the spot she had just vacated.

Immediate Repeal Asked
Secretary Knox referred pessimistically to the chances of the Russians in their battle against Germany, in leaving up to his demand for repeal of the Neutrality act.

"We would fail to be realistic," he said, "if we did not recognize that this morning the prospect of a victory for the side which is fighting against totalitarian dictatorship is in a grievous, difficult position. x x x"

Reserves of Banks Are Increased To Prevent Inflation

Federal Reserve Board Issues Order Applying to 6,600 Institutions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—The Federal Reserve Board today ordered banks to set aside a larger proportion of deposits in reserve accounts as a step to prevent credit inflation.

The increase amounted to about one-seventh and took about $1,000,000,000 of idle bank cash out of circulation where it could be loaned or invested.

The board took the action after consulting the treasury. The two agencies issued a statement saying it was part of the general anti-inflation program of the administration which includes a price control bill now pending in Congress.

Technically, today's action meant that in New York, for instance, banks must keep twenty-six per cent of their deposits in reserve instead of 23 1/2 per cent. The action, however, applied only to the approximately 6,600 banks which belong to the Federal Reserve System.

The board said that these banks had about $5,200,000,000 of idle money which they could loan out or invest. When today's order becomes effective, on November 1, that amount will be cut to about $4,000,000,000.

"The action," the board said, "will leave the banks as a whole with ample funds to meet all credit needs of the defense program and all legitimate requirements of their customers."

Russians Multiply Counter-Attacks Against Germans On Many Fronts

Say Continuing Offensive on Leningrad Flank Cost Nazis 50,000 Men, Killed, Wounded, Captured

[By The Associated Press]
MOSCOW, Sept. 23.—The Red armies multiplied their counter-attacks tonight over hundreds of miles of the front, and claimed that a continuing Russian offensive on the Leningrad flank had cost the Germans 50,000 men in dead, wounded and captured.

This figure was reported to the army organ Red Star by Lieut. General N. Vatutin from the Leningrad theater of war south of Lake Ilmen, 150 miles below Leningrad. Vatutin reported the Red army units in that sector not only were checking the Germans but successfully counter-attacking. He denied flatly a German claim that three Soviet armies had been routed in the area.

Fighting Is Continuous
The general said the Russians first routed the Fifty-sixth German Army Corps and the Eighth Tank Division south of Ilmen, then caused 10,000 German casualties in throwing back an assault on Staraya Russia. One other German thrust cost 15,000 dead and wounded, Vatutin said.

The fighting still is going on by day and night. Leningrad's own defenders were described as meeting continuous attacks at the approaches of the city with ever-stiffening resistance. One dispatch said a bayonet charge had driven the Germans back seven miles in one place; another described a German attack supported by more than 100 planes in which the missiles exploded amid the German troops.

Beleaguered Odessa, at the extreme southern end of the front, radioed news of the repulse of assaults by units of nine German and Rumanian divisions.

Snow Falls on Battlefronts
Three separate actions were reported in the center: One the defeat of two regiments of the One Hundred and Second German Infantry Division; another a battle in which 1,300 German officers or men were killed and wounded and still another—on last Saturday and Sunday—in which 250 Germans were said to have been destroyed.

Advices reaching London said the successful Red army counter-attacks had extended as deep as Glukhov, which is 160 miles northeast of Kiev and 230 miles from Smolensk where the main Soviet counter-offensive has been centered. (Continued on Page 2, Col. 8)

Russian General Says Slaughter Is Terrific on Central Front

Soviet Advantage Cited in Losses of Both Men and Material

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
WITH THE RED ARMY ON THE CENTRAL FRONT, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The German-Russian slaughter on this front has become a Verdun ten or a hundred times multiplied. Major General Vassily Sokolovsky told front correspondents today.

In this continuous grinding of men and material, he contended, the proportion of losses over the last two months has been two to one in favor of the Russian in men, and five to one in favor of the Russians in material. This, he said,

A TOAST TO FRANCE

Voluntary Pacts To Prevent Wage Increases Loom

Government Working toward Goal To Help Forestall Inflation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—Leon Henderson, price administrator, aimed another blow at efforts to include wage regulation in the administration's price control bill when he disclosed today that the government was working toward voluntary agreements to prevent wage increases and thereby help forestall inflation.

Such agreements, he told the House banking committee are "not only feasible but highly likely."

Goal for Some Time
Although he did not go into details, Henderson said Sidney Hillman, associate director-general of the Office of Production Management, had been working toward that goal for some time.

Disclosure of the voluntary wage agreement plan came at a time when strong sentiment was being manifested in the committee for all-embracing legislation which would "freeze" every element of the nation's price structure—wages, commodity prices, profits and rents.

Henderson Endorses Plan
In endorsing the voluntary plan for curbing wage increases, Henderson asserted this country had been heading toward such a solution of the wage problem toward the close of the World War and expressed belief that it would be worked out in the current emergency on a regional basis.

Henderson emphasized that wages should be kept in restraint but said that at the opening of a great national effort, such as the current armament program, "you cannot get the cooperation necessary by fixing wages."

Bridge Worker Drowns

OCEAN CITY, Md., Sept. 23. (AP)—Vernon Collins, 38, of Messonora, Va., a workman on the new Ocean City highway bridge, was killed today by a blow on the head from a steel beam which toppled him overboard.

was due to superiority of Red Army planes, tanks and artillery in this sector.

Sokolovsky, a husky, dark, clean-shaven officer of the modern Soviet school, talked quietly and confidently of the progress of the Red Army's counter-attacks.

On a sixty-mile front, he said, the Germans have been pushed back from six to thirty miles in the direction of Yartsevo.

Slipping tea as he spoke, Sokolovsky cited these examples of Soviet successes:
On one front, the Germans lost 22,500 in dead and wounded from Sept. 1 to Sept. 10; on another sector, they suffered 20,000 casualties in the first seven days of September.

British May Fight Along Side Russians To Defend Oil Riches

LONDON, Sept. 23. (AP)—Certain London quarters speculated tonight on the possibility that a British land expedition might fight alongside the Russians to defend the oil riches of the Caucasus.

Officials were silent. The Germans still are more than 500 miles from the Caucasus, which supplies nine-tenths of the U. S. R.'s ordinary oil needs from a crude production of some 30,000,000 tons a year. However, a continued powerful assault by the German armies of the Ukraine would put them in a position to menace the Black sea port of Batum, where they would obtain both oil and a gateway to India.

Tropical Storm Strikes Texas With Strong Gale

Heavy Seas and High Tides Baffle Resort Cities In-flicting Damage

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 23. (AP)—Houston, Texas' largest city late tonight was at the very center of the tropical hurricane which hurled its fury against the Texas coast this afternoon between Matagorda and Freeport.

Fierce winds suddenly struck the Houston area about 9:45 p. m., whipping into the unprepared South Texas metropolis at sixty miles an hour.

The barometer there dropped to 28.84, the lowest point yet recorded in the present disturbance.

Rain fell in torrents, whipping in through closed windows.
The Houston Post editorial room was covered with half an inch of water.

D. E. Saxby, superintendent of the Gulf States Utility Company, was electrocuted at his home in the Alvin area near Houston as he tried to disentangle a live wire.

Officials estimated $1,700,000 damage to the rice crop.

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 23. (AP)—A tropical hurricane hurled winds of ninety and 100 miles an hour against the Texas coast today from Freeport to Matagorda.

This forty-five mile stretch on the Central coast bore the brunt of the storm, which raised dangerous tides for miles to the northeast and southwest. Thousands of persons had fled to safety.

The death of one seaman was reported, but there were no reports of fatalities ashore.

The Steamship Myriam radioed the coast guard that a seaman died from the effects of salt water after being washed overboard and rescued.

Piers Are Damaged
In Galveston bay damage to piers fronting fashionable bayshore homes was estimated at $200,000.

Troops Occupy Two Argentine Army Airports

War Office Secretary Fails To Deny Subversive Activity Rumor

[By The Associated Press]
BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 23.—Argentine troops occupied the nation's two most important military airbases today and were reported moving fast into all the airbases in the country to forestall any surprise move by Nazi conspirators.

A radical member of Congress declared dramatically on the floor of the chamber of deputies that acting President Ramon S. Castillo himself "joined in the totalitarian plotting."

Military Officials
Ramon Damonte Taborda, chairman of the Argentine "Dies committee" investigating subversive activities, said some army officers were involved and a number arrested.

Taborda made the sweeping announcement of the military measures involving all the country's air bases after the occupation of two military airbases—on heavily-German populated Cordoba and Parana—had been confirmed.

Argentina's highest military officials held an urgent meeting here. Upon emerging from the conference, Col. Francisco Suarez, chief secretary of the war office, was asked whether there was any truth in rumors of subversive activities in the interior and he replied:

"I am not authorized to speak, therefore I cannot confirm or deny any report."

Earlier Acting President Ramon S. Castillo had taken cognizance of persistent reports of unrest in a certain part of Argentina by declaring there was no truth in them.

Troops at Tucuman
Besides the military activities in Cordoba and Parana, headquarters of the Fifth Corps area at Salta confirmed reports prevalent here since Sunday that troops were being quartered in Tucuman, in northwestern Argentina.

Cordoba is the capital of a province of the same name in Central Argentina and Parana is the capital of Entre Rios Province, in the east central part of the country north of Buenos Aires.

Word spread through lobbies in the Chamber of Deputies today that unrest in the three heavily-German-populated provinces called for swift action.

This version was denied by Castillo, who at the same time said the government had taken preventive measures and that he was "certain that the country as a whole is calm."

Parana dispatches said that Col. Juan Carlos Bassi, commander of the Third Army Division, marched into the airbase there at 3 a. m. today at the head of a battalion and arrested every officer and man found there.

Officer Reported Arrested
A Capt. Menendez, identified as the airbase commandant, was reported among those arrested.

No reason was given either in official or press versions for the arrests. Private Parana advices, however, said the plot was linked to political leaders opposed to the

Attacks by Axis Subs on American Merchant Cargoes to Iceland Make Plan Probable, President Declares

Counter Attacks By Russians Are Smashed on Three Fronts, Nazis Say

Germany Claims Destruction of Fifty Red Divisions Trapped East of Kiev Battleground

[By The Associated Press]
BERLIN, Sept. 23.—Russian counter-offensives in every one of the three major sectors—the most widespread yet mentioned in Nazi dispatches—were reported today but all were declared broken in a series of German victories highlighted by announcement of the destruction of fifty Red divisions trapped East of Kiev.

Of this vast force claimed to have been utterly destroyed—numbering about 750,000 men—380,000 were said to have been taken prisoner in a continuing restriction of the German grip. Authoritative commentaries thus brought to a grand total of 2,000,000 their estimate of the number of Soviet war prisoners—a figure equalling the number of Russian captives taken in four years of the World War.

Russians Fight Doggedly
Russian enlisted men were credited with fighting doggedly over every inch of ground in a series of counter-attacks about Poltava in the Lower Ukraine; Leningrad on the Northwest front and about Smolensk at the center, but all their supreme efforts were described here as failures.

Par to the east of Smolensk, it was added, Soviet advances collapsed with enormous losses—two-thirds and more of the strength of Russian units.

"The Bolsheviks," said the official German news agency DNB, "literally stormed over the corpses left by German fire."

Before Leningrad and Poltava, German informants asserted it was a similar story, with the Russians losing tanks heavily in vain efforts to stem the Nazi advances.

It was the battle east of Kiev that was stressed. Authorized persons described it as one of the greatest—and perhaps the greatest—engagements of its kind in all history.

Russian loot already taken, the high command said, included more than 570 tanks and 2,100 guns and "these figures are constantly increasing."

Accusations of dishonor were officially leveled against Soviet leadership, the high command declaring that "at many points officers and commissars left their troops in the lurch in a vain effort to find safety for themselves."

Several Small Encirclements
The situation east of Kiev tonight was thus presented by authorized informants:

The vast encirclement begun ten days ago had now resolved itself into a series of smaller encirclements. To make this breakup into smaller units possible the German strategy was first directed toward erecting "a wall of fire-arms" on the east side of the encircled area to prevent the Russians from (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

AFL Seamen's Ten-Day Old Strike Is Certified to Mediation Board

F.D.R. Says Ships Can Not Remain Idle because of Labor Trouble

[By The Associated Press]
A ten-day-old strike of AFL seamen was certified to the Defense Mediation Board yesterday and shortly thereafter President Roosevelt told a press conference that ships could not remain tied up because of labor troubles.

Those ships have got to move, the president said, in referring to twenty-five strike-bound vessels anchored in various ports. The vessels are needed to transport defense materials to American industries and lend-lease goods to enemies of the

Twenty-three Men of Sunken Pink Star Are Rescued; Ships of Panamanian Registry Have Been Armed and Congress Expected to Approve New Move: Must Not Lose Sight of Objectives

Nazi Subs Have Not Reported the Pink Star Sinking

German Navy Does, However, Report Sinking of Ships in Convoy

BERLIN, Sept. 23. (AP)—German submarines or surface craft have not specifically reported sinking the Pink Star, authorized German sources said today, but they added that whatever happened to the American-owned, Panamanian-registered freighter was "in accordance with the laws of war."

In stating they had no word on the Pink Star itself, these sources said, however, that the German navy had reported sinking a large number of ships from a convoy.

"The vessel was Panamanian, not United States," they said, "and we haven't heard yet that Panama is part of the United States."

"The vessel was sunk in waters clearly defined as a German operations area."

At a later press conference an authorized spokesman commented that "letting American ships sail under the Panamanian flag is a favorite way of evading the neutrality law."

These German sources charged that Secretary of State Hull, in advocating at his press conference yesterday a change in the American neutrality law, was "driving America still another step nearer to war."

Catalina Bomber Completes Flight After Spiral Dive

17,000 Foot Plunge over Atlantic Damages Plane's Wings

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Sept. 23. (AP)—A Catalina bomber completed a delivery flight to England with both ailerons and one wing tip missing after a 17,000-foot spiral dive over the Atlantic. Consolidated Aircraft Corp. reported today.

The company said the story was so amazing its release was delayed until confirmation could be obtained from the British ministry of information.

Half way across the Atlantic while the seaplane bomber was cruising at 18,000 feet, the automatic pilot suddenly jammed the starboard aileron, one of the flaps on the wings that give lateral control of the ship, full down.

The 30,000-pound craft went into (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that the country was probably heading toward the arming of its merchant ships to protect them from the attacks of Axis warships.

At the same time, he disclosed that some American-owned ships—former Danish vessels which have been transferred to Panamanian registry—have already been equipped with guns.

Among the latter was the Pink Star, which the president said was sunk by a submarine last Friday night 275 miles Northeast of Cape Farewell, the southernmost tip of Greenland.

The state department received word from the American consul in Reykjavik, Iceland, tonight that twenty-three of the thirty-four in the Pink Star's crew had arrived there in good condition. The report gave no details of their rescue and did not identify them.

Could Arm Ship
The Pink Star could be armed because, although American-owned, she flew the flag of Panama. The neutrality act forbids the arming of American vessels. The president, who made his announcements at a press conference, was asked whether it was intended that that law should be amended piecemeal or repealed in its entirety.

That subject, Mr. Roosevelt replied, was under study at the moment and a determination would be made some time next week.

Whatever the extent of the administration's ultimate proposal, it was certain to arouse a bitter row in Congress, although administration leaders were confident that they could obtain approval.

Mr. Roosevelt started today's press conference off abruptly without waiting for a question, by announcing the details of the sinking of the Pink Star.

A submarine sank her last Friday, he said. Her position at the time was 61.36 North and 35.07 West. There was no word, then, he said, as to the fate of the officers and crew.

The Pink Star, he continued, was part of a convoy escorted by Canadian warships, and was bound for Iceland with a general cargo. Asked (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

11-Year-Old Youth Runs Away to Visit His Girl Friend

George McLean, Jr. Travels 330-Miles To See Peggy Randall

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23. (AP)—Pretty Peggy Randall spent her summer vacation in St. Louis and she won a constant and devoted admirer in George McLean, Jr.

When Peggy left a month ago for her home in Memphis, George promised, "I'll come to see you as soon as possible."

That was a big promise. You see, George is only 11 and Peggy is 8.

Keeps His Word
But George kept his word, even though he had to run away from home, outwit several detectives and take a 330-mile train ride to do it.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George McLean, finding him missing Saturday, notified police.

Detectives at Union Station spotted a boy in his Sunday best, carefully going over an array of dolls at the toy counter. He bought one for $3.

"Hello," a detective greeted him, "where are you going?"

"To Memphis," the boy replied. "They're expecting me. I've got a ticket. See?"

Hesitate to Detain Him
The blond, blue-eyed boy fitted the runaway's description, but he was so confident and self-assured the detectives hesitated to detain him. While they hesitated, the train pulled out, with George aboard.

Edward Stettinius Opposes Russian Aid Restrictions

Not Policy of Government To Help Soviets with Lease-Lend Funds

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP)—Opposition to any restriction that would prohibit Lend-Lease assistance to Russia was reported to have been expressed before a House Subcommittee today by Edward R. Stettinius, Lend-Lease administrator.

Before the same group, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard also testified that a minimum of $1,000,000,000 would be needed to keep England supplied with food over the next five months.

Appropriation Favored

Both spoke in behalf of the new $5,985,000,000 appropriation recently requested by President Roosevelt for the Lend-Lease program.

Stettinius, however, was said to have conditioned his statement on Russian aid with an explanation that it was not the policy of the government to give the Soviet government materials bought with Lend-Lease funds.

Russia has been paying for her purchases, but recently was given advance credits on certain Russian exports to this country in order that she might buy war materials here.

Emphatic in Opposition

Nevertheless Stettinius was emphatic in opposing any amendment to the bill which would prevent help to the Soviets. The future is too uncertain, he was reported to have said, that any restrictive provisions would be highly undesirable. Wickard testified that Great Britain was "dependent upon North America for huge quantities of food stuffs. . . . Unless the British are to lose to Hitler, he said, "the deficit has to be made up from this country and Canada." Moreover, he said that British dependence upon this continent for food might be greater "in the months just ahead than in those of the past."

Congressional inquiry into anti-Argentine activities.

As the Chamber of Deputies ended its session late tonight, Emir Merced, a radical deputy, shouted on the floor:

"Young officers caught conspiring in the interior of the country have been arrested."

Another radical, Eduardo Tesaire, charged that Castillo himself "joined in the totalitarian plotting."

Censorship apparently prevented disclosure of the exact part of Argentina where the unrest was rumored, but the military activity indicated it was in Parana and Cordoba, where a wholesale roundup of suspects in an alleged Nazi plot to overthrow the government was made on Aug. 9.

Nazi Envoy Censured

"There since has been the action of the Argentine Chamber of Deputies in censuring German Ambassador Edmund Von Thermann and a demand that leaders of allegedly subversive Nazi organizations be ejected from the country."

The rumors began spreading simultaneously with last Friday night's demonstration in which two bombs were thrown in front of the fashionable embassy residence of German Ambassador Von Thermann.

Tonight's military activity followed a Berlin press attack on Argentina. Informed quarters said Castillo would ask his ministers to consider this and the congressional censure of Von Thermann at a cabinet meeting tomorrow or Thursday.

These informants said the chief executive was believed to be awaiting word from the Argentine ambassador in Berlin as to whether the Nazi press attacks were officially sanctioned.

The Argentine Chamber of Deputies voted with but one dissenting voice on Sept. 15 for the expulsion of ringleaders of Nazi underground organizations, among whom his "Dies committee" named Von Thermann.

The German envoy was not mentioned by name in the expulsion demand but the resolution did censure him for abusing diplomatic privileges.

Von Thermann has announced that he would not leave voluntarily.

Fort Knox Soldier Wins Prize Fight

The bell saved Christie at the count of eight in the second round and he was down twice before being counted out in the third.

Windsors To Tour States and Canada

Duke Refuses To Discuss World Matters until Vacation Ends

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 23 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor, starting a six weeks' vacation trip with his American-born duchess, said today he wanted to withhold opinions about world matters until he had time to visit the United States and Canada.

"I want to observe world conditions during my trip over the United States and Canada before I say anything," The former king said in an impromptu radio broadcast shortly after the royal couple reached Miami in a chartered plane from the Bahamian capital of Nassau.

"I can speak for all my countrymen," the Duke added, "when I express to America the heartfelt thanks of Britain for all of the moral and material support you are so lavishly giving her."

The vacation for the Windsors will include visits to Washington, New York and Baltimore, the latter the former home of the Duchess.

The first day of their trip providing little of the rest and privacy the Windsors hoped to obtain by arranging a strictly unofficial stopover in Miami.

Crowds greeted them enthusiastically at the airport and at their Bayfront hotel. They will continue tomorrow by train for Washington and a White House luncheon.

AFL Seamen's

striking against the huge Consolidated Aircraft plant.

The balloting was ordered by the AFL machinists union after negotiations over wage increases had broken down. W. J. Chudleigh, president of the union local, made the estimate that the vote would be ten to one for a strike.

Aircraft Workers Want Raise

The union has rejected a company offer to increase the minimum wage scale from 55-65 cents an hour to 60-75, the rates varying with experience. The union demanded a blanket 10-cents-an-hour increase for all workers not affected by raises in minimum wages for beginners agreed upon previously.

The Maritime Commission had offered to meet representatives of the shipping industry and the seamen's union in Washington Thursday to discuss the war bonus dispute. An acceptance was received yesterday from the American Merchant Marine Institute, but the union stuck to its previously expressed determination not to confer with the owners at such a conference.

The commission last week requisitioned three strike-bound freighters of the Alcoa Line over the union's objections.

Anthracite Coal Strike Continues

Insurgent hard coal miners of the Hazleton, Pa., area suspended for the time being their attempts to spread revolt against higher dues levied by the CIO United Mine Workers. Already 20,000 men are idle in the UMWA's District Seven where operations are at a standstill.

Labor conciliators and representatives of John L. Lewis, UMW president, are trying to settle the dispute.

how Washington had received word of the incident, the president declined to say.

Question Is Being Studied

The press conference discussion swung at once to the question of arming ships and a reporter asked whether measures of self-defense for the vessels should not be taken.

That, the president replied, was pending question.

He then cautioned the public against letting details of the war at sea cloud the general objective of American defense and lend-lease efforts.

The discussion veered back to the question of arming the ships, with a reporter asking whether it was easier to defend the ships if they themselves were armed.

Mr. Roosevelt said he believed it was and that we were probably heading toward arming our own merchant ships and the vessels of other American vessels as well.

A correspondent brought up a recent statement by Secretary of the Navy Knox that there were not enough guns available for arming the vessels. The president said that as applied to the whole merchant marine that was undoubtedly true and went on to indicate plainly that sufficient weapons were available for equipping such ships as are sent into the danger zone.

breaking out and to prevent relief from entering.

Despite the bitterest of Russian resistance—in which civilians joined—this "wall" was completed. The Russians next tried to interfere with bringing up German supplies, but their attacks were not effective.

Meanwhile, army corps after army corps of German infantry kept reaching appointed stations in a churning process by which it was claimed that the Russians were chased by the tens of thousands into murderous Nazi fire.

SMOKY BUSINESS DURING MANEUVERS

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin's statement that the greatest "battle of annihilation" in history is about completed against nearly 750,000 Russian troops trapped east of Kiev must be accepted with caution. Russian, British and even German bulletins indicate there is still a wide gap through which much of the retreating Red force could escape eastward.

The Russians have been making counter attacks on both flanks of a Nazi effort to expand the Kiev pocket eastward toward Kharkov. While the Germans say the attacks have been repulsed, London appears more optimistic over Russian chances of reducing the scope of the Red army disaster in the Kiev area, and of halting the Nazi push toward Kharkov.

So far as the situation can be mapped from meager reports, the Germans have lashed eastward both north and south from the Kiev pocket, endeavoring to close the jaws of a new and vaster trap.

London notes a Russian counter attack on that Northern Nazi column at Glukova (Glushkova). Coupled with the Red counter attack in the Poltava region, this indicates that the 100 miles span between Poltava and Glukova is open still for Russian retreatment from the pocket to form a new front for defense of Kharkov.

The importance of that is doubled by the fact that virtually mid-way of the Poltava-Glukova gap run the only railroad and highway connections still available to the Russians for withdrawal from the Kiev pocket.

Assuming that the Poltava and Glukova counter attacks mean that heavy Red reinforcements have been hurried to block the road to Kharkov from both Moscow and the Smolensk sector in the North and from the lower donets and don positions in the South, a North-West battle line in good defensible terrain may be taking shape.

The region is better equipped with rail and road communications from the east than from the west. Provided the Russians have sufficient forces to hold apart the jaws of the expanding Nazi pincer drive east of Kiev, defense lines for Kharkov could be stabilized in very favorable terrain.

However, the Germans are already astride rail routes both north and south which could be used to snap shut a gigantic new trap.

London's description of the situation east of Kiev as still "ugly" takes the possibility of a new Nazi encirclement via these two railroads into consideration. Whether it can be achieved or not depends of the ability of the Russians to prevent a new junction of German forces almost within sight of Kharkov. If these Russians fail, a large number of Stalin's troops may be engulfed in a new trap.

Naming of Marbury As Judge Predicted

UPPER MERIDON, Md., Sept. 23 (AP)—The Washington Star said today that reliable persons predicted the appointment soon of State Senator Charles C. Marbury of Prince Georges county as an associate judge of the Seventh Judicial Circuit.

The appointment would fill a vacancy left by the retirement of Judge Joseph C. Mattingly.

Among others, the paper said, Marbury has the endorsement of the St. Mary's County Bar Association, Democratic members of the Calvert County Bar, the Queens Chapel Citizens Assortment and the Strawn-Turner Post, No. 1627 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Without preference, the Maryland State Bar Association has endorsed both Marbury and S. Marvin Peach, Hyattsville attorney.

Tropical Storm

Meanwhile at Corpus Christi, about 130 miles down the coast from Matagorda, tides dropped swiftly and the wind slackened off to twenty miles an hour.

Army officials at camps Wallace and Hulen, near Galveston and Palacios respectively said no injuries had resulted from the storm.

Telephonic communication with Matagorda failed during the day after high tides reportedly spread over the town. Its 1,250 residents were believed, however, to have heeded warnings to seek shelter.

Camp Hulen near Palacios was deserted except for a few service troops as 2,000 men were moved to higher ground at Wharton. Palacios was boarded up, as were Port Lavaca, Bay City, and Freeport.

By early afternoon, seventy to seventy-five miles per hour winds battered Freeport, site of the new $25,000,000 Dow Chemical Plant and of the Freeport Sulphur Company, industries figuring in national defense production.

Rice Crop Suffers

Most hurricane-wee residents of Port O'Connor, a fishing village of 500 persons at the entrance to Matagorda Bay, fled to safer Port Lavaca. One hundred stuck to the windswept point of land all night, but state highway department trucks evacuated all but a few as the wind continued to rise and water swept into the town from the sea.

Business houses at Bay City, twenty-one miles north of Matagorda, were boarded up, but there was no danger from tidal water. County officials feared the $1,500,000 rice crop would be badly damaged by the wind.

Boatmen at Port Arkansas, fishing resort on the fringe of the hurricane area, hauled their craft by trailer into the sand dunes of Mustang Island. All but about 100 persons of the town's 500 population moved to the mainland before ferry service was discontinued.

Increase in Men Sent to Prison Causes Concern

Gov. O'Connor Initiates Move Toward Solving Situation in Maryland

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 23 (AP)—Governor O'Connor expressed concern today for what he had observed to be a marked and gradual increase in Maryland's prison population.

The state's total average prison population increased from 1,345 in 1920 to 2,356 in 1940, he said. Present indications point to an average population of approximately 3,000 in 1941.

O'Connor said he had noted an "alarming increase in the number of repeat offenders" received at state institutions and had found it advisable "to initiate a move looking toward a solution of the problem of handling the many inmates" serving more than one term.

The governor disclosed that the cost of maintaining the prison population had mounted to approximately $1,000,000 a year.

He announced that Willis R. Jones, director of the Board of Correction, and Herman M. Moser, director of Parole and Probation, would confer on the adoption of a system to find employment for prisoners who had received more than one conviction and to afford greater supervision after release.

"As these cases are of the most vital concern to the people of the entire state, affecting as they do our economy and our safety, I consider it imperative that some workable plan be devised by which we can assist to a greater extent those persons who are released from our penal institutions," the governor said.

The German air force, he estimated, has lost 1950 planes in the central area since the start of the battle of Smolensk.

"This," he said, "is evidence of how quickly the enemy is being exhausted."

Over hundreds of miles of the front, the general related, the Germans now are digging in and "what lies ahead of them is trench warfare and the winter mud of Russian roads."

But, he said, "what we depend on for resources is not only the U. S. S. R. but also the British and American peoples. . . . Every extra plane, shell, tank and gun will be more than welcome, and the sooner they are here the sooner victory will be achieved."

Then the other aileron broke loose and fluttered away.

This saved the plane, the pilot reported, because it served to balance the bomber.

Just 800 feet above the water the Catalina, with both pilots straining at the manual controls, swooped into level flight.

The ship, carrying a crew of six, was six hours from its destination.

15,000 Troops Will Move Thursday for Army Maneuvers

"Fighting Twenty-ninth" To Comprise Two 100-Mile Long Columns

By FRANCIS FLEMING
A. P. HILL MILITARY RESERVATION, Sept. 23 (AP)—If inhabitants of a city of 15,000 decided to move to a new location 400 miles distant, the operation probably would extend over a period of several months and put many a housewife in the hospital with hysterics.

But not the boys of the "Fighting Twenty-ninth." It will be "business as usual" for them until Thursday, the last day of their two-week training period here. Then, at midnight, with only a few hours of final preparations, they will begin moving to Morven, N. C., for two months of maneuvers.

An idea of the enormity of the job is given in an announcement from the One Hundred Fortieth Quartermaster Regiment that the 2,331 vehicles which will do the greater part of the hauling, will consume about 50,000 gallons of gasoline the first day. Only one stage of the exodus then will have been completed.

First stopover points enroute will be Blackstone and Camp Lee, where the soldiers will bivouac Friday night. The columns will converge Saturday at Fort Bragg, N. C., where the men will rest over the weekend. By nightfall Monday all convoys will have trundled into their new home site, staff officers said today.

"Trail-blazing for the two 100-mile long columns will be the District of Columbia's One Hundred Twenty-first Engineers."

The duties of the engineers will be to examine bridges to be sure that individual spans will support fifteen tons, which is the minimum strength required for this troop movement.

Don't Be

about whom we know nothing," the speaker went on. "Knowing that his scheme will not stand close investigation, he works fast and urges immediate acceptance of his wares. When a victim has time to think it is too late. He has paid his money and possibly signed a contract providing for the payment of additional sums."

Schemes Explained

"Let us for a moment consider some of the schemes which have been used in Cumberland recently to take money away from thrifty, hardworking people."

"Perhaps the most astounding piece of trickery and robbery was carried out by a band of gypsies, who through carefully laid plans secured several thousand dollars of the savings of a trusting old lady."

It hardly seems possible that anyone could be victimized by such devices as the gypsies use. There is nothing new about their methods. Their very presence in the community should have made our citizens suspicious, yet they sought, and found their victim and got away with the money.

"In recent years there has been much remodeling of houses, stimulated perhaps by the F.H.A. program under which funds could be obtained on easy terms. Taking advantage of public interest, unscrupulous organizations sent representatives into Cumberland and made many contracts for re-roofing, applying new siding and insulating homes owned by hardworking citizens."

"The amounts paid for these jobs in many cases were excessive. The work could have been done by local, reputable contractors for less money. Our local people are in a position, and are willing, to stand back of work they do. The outsider finishes his job, collects his money and departs. When defects develop he can't be reached. His customer 'holds the bag'."

One-sided Contract

"One of our well-known citizens made such a contract with a Pittsburgh concern for $895. The sum was paid and the job now shows very evident defects. Letters written to the contractor are unanswered, and an examination of the contract shows that it was entirely one-sided and the victim has no recourse. As a matter of fact, the contract did not even carry the street address of the operator. Had this work been done by Cumberland people, there would have been no difficulty in securing rectification of the defective materials."

"In recent months, through alluring advertising, our young people have been offered courses of study in numerous trade schools. The technique used by these institutions is based on the offer of steady employment at very high wages upon graduation in a few weeks or during the course of study. In all instances an immediate, substantial down payment is demanded and the student is given no time in which to investigate the institution. As a rule, it is pretty safe to assume that a dependable institution will allow time for a proper check-up on its responsibility."

Magazine Racket Hit

"Other solicitors employed by large magazine circulating organizations prey upon our emotions. They are schooled in the art of arousing our sympathy. Their method of operation follows a common pattern. The leader and five or six girls or boys land in town, canvas the city in a few days and then depart."

"These organizations keep within the bounds of the law in their operations, but the stories told by

Senate Questions Film Executive

Conspiring of Companies against One Is "Crime," Schenck Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP)—Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's Inc., told a Senate committee today that he would consider it "the worst kind of a crime" for a group of companies to "get together" to prevent another company from doing business, adding that he did not believe that such a situation could arise in the moving picture industry.

The film executive made this assertion when he was questioned by Chairman Clark (D-Idaho) of the Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee considering charges of "propaganda" and "monopoly" in the industry.

In advance of his questions, Clark said he wished to ascertain whether five of the eight major film producing companies did not "really control the other three," asserting that the three which operated no theaters were "more or less at the mercy" of the five companies which owned or controlled a total of 2,800 first run show houses.

Schenck contended that theater ownership did not give the five companies control of producers who did not have their own exhibition outlets.

Clark asked him whether the five companies could not prevent the success of any picture by refusing to show it in their theaters.

"We five could never get together," Schenck declared. "To do that would be absolutely a crime and something that we have no right to do." Observing that each of the companies had thousands of employees, he asked:

"How could you keep a secret of that kind—combining and conspiring to injure some one?"

Terps and Colonials Engage in Scrimmage

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 23 (AP)—George Washington university gridgers engaged in a ninety minute scrimmage with the University of Maryland today, and both teams showed to better advantage offensively than on defense.

Maryland used only Fullback Jack Wright from the first team, and it was Wright and Elmer Rigby who did most of the ground-gaining for the Terps. Walt Fedora ripped off some long gains for the Colonials.

Later, the Terrapin first string ran through a long signal drill with Wright joining in to complete his hard day's work.

Baltimorean Heads Tropical Park Track

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 23 (AP)—Henry L. Straus of Baltimore was elected president and Herbert Bayard Swope of New York was chosen chairman of the board of governors today of the reorganized Gables Racing Association, operator of the Tropical Park race track here.

Straus is head of a syndicate which recently purchased eighty-seven per cent of the stock in the corporation for $1,200,000 after the Florida Racing Commission had demanded a reorganization.

their representatives are colorful falsehoods carefully rehearsed for our benefit. The victims of the school disaster at Brownsville, Texas, were employed as solicitors; sailors from British ships are used as the means of arousing our sympathy, persuading us to purchase merchandise we do not want. Then they use our names to victimize our friends."

"If we don't enjoy being suckers, let us be careful. Let us not be swept away by enthusiastic, high pressure salespeople whom we do not know. Let us take time to investigate before we turn over our hard earned money or sign one-sided contracts with concerns about which we know nothing."

Three Frenchmen Are Executed in Lille District

Described as "Communist Terrorist" and Accused of Bombings

(By The Associated Press)
VICHY, Unoccupied France, Sept. 23.—German execution squads today in the Lille district, near the Belgium border, disclosed acts of sabotage still another sector of occupied France.

The three were described by Germans as "Communist terrorists" and were accused of bombings and incendiaries.

Six Persons Convicted

In Paris, scene of thirty recent executions of hostages, others, six persons were convicted by a special anti-Communist court of spreading party propaganda. They were sentenced to prison terms high as twelve years.

Police searching through the called "Red Belt" in the Paris suburbs announced the arrest of ten persons, the seizure of printing press, paper tracts, revolvers and three 75 caliber anti-aircraft shells. Those arrested were taken to jail for trial.

Hostages Arrested

(In Belgium the newspaper Brussels Zeitung reported twenty-five hostages arrested by the Germans at Tournai would be retained "unless the assassins of two German policemen were within ten days."

"The paper based this on an order by the German command which stated: 'In future, all five hostages will be summarily executed for further attacks on political prisoners in Belgium. The future will be considered hostages during the day ordered air raid precautions. Whether resulted from any real information of prospective British bombing operations was not stated."

NORDEN EMPLOYE SAYS HE KNEW BOMBSIGHT SECRET, SAYS G-MAN

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (AP)—FBI counter-espionage agent said today at the trial of a man in Brooklyn federal charges of espionage that Henry Lang, a defendant, told him (Lang) "was the only man I knew the American secret."

What the secret was, States Attorney Harold K. did not bring out immediately in his examination of the William G. Seboid, who earlier he turned over to the espionage assignment to the and became a counter-espionage agent. Earlier in the trial, K. accused Lang of selling the Norden bombsight to Germany. Lang was at one time employed by Carl L. Norden, Inc., bomb manufacturers, as a machine draftsman. Seboid testified several meetings with Lang, of which the bombsight was discussed.

Seboid said that Lang was reluctant to talk with him and Seboid relayed to him various and pass words which he had Germany via a German spy radio with which United agents corresponded, posing a man agent.

School Is Strain On Average Child, Dr. Myers Says

Youngsters Often Cry Easily or Develop Tem- per Tantrums

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

We parents do not realize the degree of nervous strain upon the average little child at school. Yes, we know he has more freedom than we had when we were children. But there is more excitement in his school than was in ours, and he probably does not have parents as calm as we were our parents.

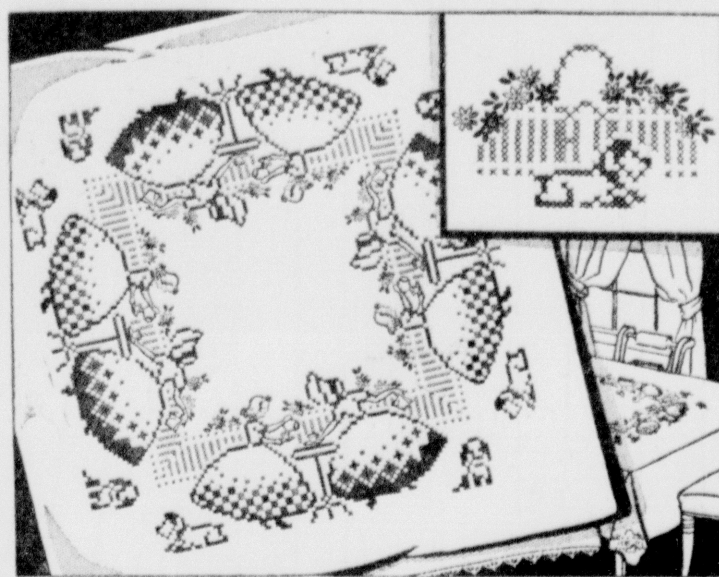

Anyway, it is not always well with the young school child. How frequently the pupil of the first grade, or even of the kindergarten, a week or two after the opening of school, seems to misbehave at home. He may cry easily, develop or increase temper tantrums, grow stubborn or come into frequent conflict with the children of the neighborhood. Ten chances to one he gets a good deal of scolding and punishment, and his parents are distressed to find that most of their punishment does not work as they had expected it to work.

Be on guard for these troubles. Be more patient and considerate of the child. Work out ways of preventing troubles and avoiding scenes and conflicts. Spend more time at supervising his home play, but do not be meddlesome with his playground quarrels.

Try to reduce the number of commands you have been used to giving and work out ways to lesson scolding and punishment.

child does to merit praise, and then don't be miserly with approvals. Take a nap in the afternoon yourself, mother, before the child comes home, so that you may be best fitted to welcome him and to engineer a quiet family program at the evening meal.

Work for a happy but not too noisy dinner hour, not interrupted by your frequent getting up and down, nor by the suggestion of haste. Shut off the radio except for very quiet music. Work for an atmosphere at home of peaceful leisure for the entire evening hour.

Quiet and Relaxation
Don't let the child get too weary at his play. Induce him to come in for a few minutes' quiet and relaxation, particularly before meal time. Neglect the rest of the family, if necessary. Let the beans burn, potatoes boil dry. They are relatively unimportant.

Avoid romping and excitement just before bedtime. See that the child goes to bed on time, at a regular hour. Have a clock and use it. Exercise skill enough, avoid all scenes and annoyances, getting him happily to bed. Go to bed soon enough in the morning to avoid undue rush and anxiety. Send the child off to school in a cheery, hopeful frame of mind.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

YOUR HARDEST PROBLEM

THERE IS one problem in bridge which is much harder to solve than that of coping with your opponents. It is a question of what to do if you have a partner who is a confirmed over-bidder. Every balanced and versatile cardman pays heed to protecting himself against this danger, not by deliberately underbidding himself, but usually making the weakest of various alternative bids which might be considered sound. Even then, he may have to play his head off because of the sublime confidence reposed in his playing ability by a partner who raises him too high.

partners, but only a tentative 1-Heart. However, the over-bidder jumped to 2-No Trumps on a hand good enough for only 1-Spade or 1-No Trump. He then made a mere tentative semi-physic bid of 3-Diamonds, to see what the whirling dervish would do next. The rest is easy to see in the bidding stated, including the use of the Blackwood convention.

It is a good thing Mr. Hazen was playing the hand. He did a great job. After the spade K lead to the A, he built a double squeeze. He took the heart K and A, then the club A and K for spade discards, and ruffed a club. He proceeded then with hearts.

As the last heart was laid down, he also held his three diamonds, retaining in dummy the diamond K-2, the club 8 and spade J. West could not throw off his spade Q, so discarded one of his three diamonds. The spade J was then discarded, and East now was impossible squeezed between the club Q to guard the 8 and his diamond J-7-6 to guard against South's third diamond, so the contract was made in gorgeous style.

season's wood, but taken after the leaves have dropped.

When taking cuttings, make a straight cut just below a node or bud. Make cuttings from 6 to 15 inches long. As shown in the illustration, tie the cuttings in bundles, not exceeding 25 cuttings to a bundle, and keep all the lower or cut ends together.

Place these cuttings in moist sand, sawdust or peat. If the cuttings are to be stored in a box, place a three-inch layer of sawdust on the bottom of the box, then lay the cuttings horizontally on the sawdust. Cover the cuttings with another layer of sawdust. Use a box longer than the cuttings themselves so that the air can circulate about them. A box with spaces between the boards or slats is best. Over winter keep the box of cuttings in a cool place in the cellar.

Another method of storing cuttings is to bury them in the ground below the frost line. Mark the spot carefully so the cuttings can be easily located and dug out again in the spring to plant out in nursery rows.

Opportunities a Plenty for State Republicans

OPPOSING the suggestion that Maryland Republicans suspend functioning of their party to the extent of refraining from naming a candidate for governor in the next campaign, the Towson News-Tribune points out that the party will have many opportunities "to sink a knife into the Maryland Democratic octopus between now and the fall of 1942." Not only that, but they will also have plenty of Democratic help—that is, Democrats who have become disgusted with the lack of real political leadership in the Democratic party.

The News-Tribune cites some of the opportunities provided by Democratic dissension. "... we can cash in on the many bitter fights being waged within the wigwag of O'Connor. Chief Jackson is ready, and anxious, to scalp Herbie.

"Ambrose J. Kennedy is sending up smoke signals, notifying his braves to get ready for a battle because he did not get his pet project, the proposed Baltimore-Washington highway, for which he blames the governor.

"Right here in Baltimore county, the Kelley and Baldwin factions are staging a knock-down and drag-out fight. Kelley, who used to be the big chief, has had to step down because O'Connor has handed all the wampum, in the way of jobs, to Street Baldwin. You can't build up much of a political organization without jobs for the faithful.

"These are not 'issues' of course, but are opportunities. ...

"Baltimore county Republican leaders should be alert for this situation. Up to this time they have been very quiet, indicating either a lack of foresight or a lackadaisical attitude. Either one will not win a battle.

"Today is the time to start building up a strong political organization. It will not do to wait two weeks before the primaries. The voters have a right to, and should, know the issues facing them.

"Already Democratic political banners are being posted in prominent places. We urge the Republican leaders to get busy. Put all petty bickering aside and present a real, militant front to the Democrats."

Sensible advice, indeed, and as applicable over here in Western Maryland as in Baltimore city and Baltimore county. As the News-Tribune says, the opportunities exist plentifully and it would be foolish for Republicans not to take advantage of them right now as well as later on.

Plastics Will Make Santa's Load Lighter

THERE IS a saying that nobody ever shoots at Santa Claus, a prophetic remark once made when a politician was asked whether he thought the Republican party or the Democratic party would win the 1936 presidential election.

The phrase is recalled by the disclosure that Santa Claus appears destined to be exempted from hardship during the defense program. In fact, it is asserted that his burden is to be made easier. Dispatches from Washington reveal that because of the wider use of light-weight plastics in the making of toys, Santa's load this year will be lighter than it ever was, although none is less sparkling and colorful.

It is not unreasonable that Santa alone should benefit by modern war and its implications. In fact, Santa, in a certain sense, antedated the methods of the blitzkrieg. For one thing, he appears all over the world on a single night, and long before the airplane was invented he roamed over the chimney tops of numerous nations. Before parachutes were made, he vaulted down fireplaces with heavy loads of toys. True, he has clung tenaciously to a form of transportation that is now largely passe, but this must be attributed to his appreciation of the romantic. It is good news that this genial character's burden will be lightened this Christmas by the use of plastics; he may even be able to get along with two fewer reindeer.

A Transfer That Can't Be Made

MANY PERSONS are unable to understand why the United States does not repudiate the French government at Vichy and transfer recognition to the Free French government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. A writer points out that there is no such thing as a Free French government headed by de Gaulle.

Gen. de Gaulle is a French soldier who is fighting on the side of the British against Nazi Germany. The men under his command are engaged on several fronts and are in occupation of a considerable amount of French territory, mainly in Africa. Gen. de Gaulle has his headquarters in London.

But there is no French-government-in-exile as there is a Dutch-government-in-exile, and a Belgian and a Polish. General de Gaulle's principal claim to fame and a clean record among his fellow-countrymen is that he has never been a politician and has no intention of starting now. He has sedulously avoided being tarred by the same stick as, say, Laval or Pétain.

Secretary of State Hull asserts that he has not heard of an offer by Gen. de Gaulle to give the United States the use of bases he controls in French Africa near Dakar. The State department deals with governments and the only French government which today enjoys legal standing is the sorry one at Vichy. That does not mean that another one could not be established. It does mean that no other has been established by de Gaulle or anyone else.

Defense Spending Affects Areas

REPORTS from industrial centers having defense orders bear a striking resemblance: Heavy traffic, scarcity of houses, big increases in retail trade. Cities without defense orders are not doing so well.

There are some areas that are riding high, wide and handsome. The Boston industrial area, which includes the cities of Haverhill, Lowell, Lawrence and Brockton, has more than $1,000,000,000 of defense contracts, all placed since June, 1940. The total defense figure for all New England is more than $2,000,000,000. They know how to make hay while the sun shines.

The Los Angeles area in California is in high gear. Makers of airplanes there have orders totaling $1,500,000,000 and builders of ocean-going ships have contracts touching $300,000,000. In 1939 the Douglas, Lockheed, North American, Northrup and Vultee airplane plants employed 25,000 men. Now the figure is 100,000 and a peak of 140,000 is expected.

Another exceptional area is Alabama. Birmingham is booming. The state has $350,000,000 in defense orders ranging from ships, shells, smokeless powder to aluminum and underwear.

The Two-Party System

MUCH is to be said in behalf of party regularity. James A. Farley stressed its importance the other day and noted that abdication of their functions by the dominant political parties would leave only one alternative—the exercise of power by irresponsible groups.

There are occasions, of course, when weighty issues transcend party fealty. These, however, are infrequent and may be met usually through the medium of the two-party system without necessarily transferring one's allegiance, although that is one of the privileges of free American citizens. The two-party system has proved effective in this nation since its founding, and Europe has furnished many sad lessons why the multiplication of party organizations proves disastrous.

"The world has seen—notably in France and in Germany of the Weimar republic—," says the New York Herald Tribune, "what evils can be caused by the multiplication of political parties: the shifting coalitions, the incessant bargaining among heterogeneous groups, the temporary allegiances and betrayals, the paralysis of orderly processes and the tendency to grant extraordinary powers to the executive whenever decisive action is required.

"Such proliferation of parties, in fact, exaggerates to absurdity all of the weaknesses of democratic government, and to maintain the vigor of the two-party system should be the endeavor of every American sincerely interested in the welfare of his country."

It should, indeed.

Final Battlefield May Be in Near East

TWO YEARS AGO long-headed military experts were saying that the final battlefield of the war might surround the eastern end of the Mediterranean. Many signs now seem to point to Northern Africa and the Near East as the likely scene of a struggle which may be decisive in the long run. Only dramatic disaster to the Russians' fight on the eastern front could stave it off.

Ancient conquerors won and lost their empires in the area where Europe, Asia and Africa meet. There lies one of the world's oldest and most blood-soaked battlefields. Armageddon is there and the "highway out of Egypt into Assyria" along which hosts of armed men have marched.

It is believed the British have nearly a million men there, better armed and equipped than any army they have put into the field so far. Many of them are seasoned veterans of mechanized desert warfare. Occupation of Syria and Iran were among the opening moves in the mighty game. The flow of American supplies to the Red Sea and Suez by sea and air is a portent of big things to come.

Fifth columnists and spies traveling in disguise as "tourists" should be easy to detect. The tourist is always asking directions to the nearest filling station or hamburger stand.

Like Riding a Bicycle

By MARSHALL MASLIN

You sit on the seat, you grasp the handlebars, you set your feet on the pedals, you give yourself a little push—and away you go, riding a bicycle.

Keep pedaling and you keep going. Lean inward when you make a turn. If you fall off, get up and get on and try again. The secret of the thing is using natural law and having confidence. If you are afraid you'll never learn to ride a bicycle.

When you ride a bicycle you are using a law of motion. I know what it is, but I've forgotten. But you needn't know the law exists in order to use it. You ride the bicycle and that's enough for you. ... After you learn how it's done, you can't understand why it was ever difficult. And you can't UNLEARN it.

Living is something like that!

Some people have a bad time from the start and never seem to be at ease in life. They go at it awkwardly, as though they would conquer life by main strength and determination. Or they are timid and uncertain and they look upon life as a diabolic machine contrived to make them seem ridiculous.

There are certain laws about living but the fortunate folk use them without knowing they exist. Laws about getting along with other people, laws about winning your way and accepting victory and reconciling defeat, all laws about big and little things, about trivial or magnificent affairs. And some who have never been to school at all know instinctively, it seems, how to use these laws of life; while others who are packed with learning and noisy with theory never do seem to learn how to live—and are like fumbling children to the end of their days.

Wise living IS something like riding a bicycle. A good deal of faith must go into it. A good deal of natural wisdom. And confidence that even if you do fall off, you'll not be hurt very much and you can get on again and keep going until you conquer and succeed in what you have set out to do.

Neglected Trade To Latin America Gets Attention

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Uncle Sam is reshuffling his consular service at a great rate, with a view to taking better care of his Latin-American export trade.

It's been in bad shape of late because of late, because of defensive and lease-lend demands on our industries have been so heavy that they haven't been able to fill Latin-American orders.

Nearly $100,000,000 worth of them are piled up, waiting to be attended to, and there are signs that many would-be customers are becoming exceedingly impatient—that we'd better hustle up shipments to 'em, or, by the time we get around to it, we may find we've lost their patronage permanently.

Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones has taken the situation in hand and has evolved a scheme for breaking the bottleneck.

Looks to Little Fellows

Most of the orders are received by export houses that don't produce their merchandise, but buy it from manufacturers, and practically all of the country's bigger plants are so busy that they can't make deliveries to the exporters.

But Secretary Jones discovers that there are about 15,000 comparatively small concerns that don't produce war supplies, but do turn out the kinds of civilian goods that the Latin Americans are clamoring for. Jesse had a thorough survey made and now has a complete list of these little fellows. No such list ever has been available before and the exporting middlemen appear to have been more or less unconscious of 'em. And, relative to the size of 'em, it's Jesse's judgment that, combined, their productive volume will approximately equal that of the comparatively few big ones.

Clearing House

His idea is to have the Latin Americans turn their orders in to our consulates in their various vicinities, to have the consulates forward 'em to suitable Yankee exporters, and then to have the exporters submit 'em to his departmental clearing house, which, from its master list, will place 'em with the right smallish manufacturers. These, having done the necessary processing, will ship the finished goods to the exporters, who, in turn, will forward 'em to Latin America.

Of course a very considerable personnel will be required to handle this job. Jesse has drafted quite a staff of experts to deal with it. "For the duration." However, consuls, vice consuls and commercial attaches will be the nub of the outfit. They'd be the whole thing except that there aren't enough of 'em to get away with it and look after their other duties.

And here's where the consular reshuffling fits into the program.

Consulates Closed

A lot of our consulates general and plain consulates have been closed throughout Axis-dominated Europe and a sizable crowd of consuls general, plain consuls and mere vice consuls are back in Washington, hitherto wondering what was going to become of 'em. Jesse Jones knows. He's going to incorporate 'em into his clearing house.

A good many members of our Latin-American staffs probably will be called home for local activity in connection with the scheme. They'll be familiar with Latin-American conditions and their advice will be valuable. But naturally their Latin-American positions will have to be refilled. Indeed, additions will have to be made. These will be just the berths for the chaps back from Europe. Not only will there be no redundancy of 'em. There'll be a scarcity. When the war's over, perhaps they'll be returned to Europe, but, at any rate, they'll be provided for, for the present.

It's recognized that a certain amount of rationing is likely to be found necessary.

Jones To Tell 'Em

The 15,000 small factories' entire output can't be drained off for export Latin Americanward. That would mean famine for home civilian consumption. Prospects are that it will be pinched somewhat, and that, on the opposite hand, Latin America won't get quite all it's in the market for. It will be up to Jesse Jones' clearing house to dictate a fair division.

Incidentally, Jesse may be in a good bit of competition for priorities with our defense and lease-lend priority seekers.

The defense and lease-lend folk want everything in sight and Jesse's break for his Latin-American export program. And when Jesse demands something, he isn't an easy cabinet member to say no to.

Roosevelt and The Record

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

President Roosevelt's explanation of the 1938 "purge," with which he continues his series in Collier's Weekly, is no more convincing than his explanation of the supreme court fight, and no more disposed to promote national unity in a time of great crisis.

What interested us chiefly in this week's installment, however, was the president's justification of his primary activity. "I believe," he wrote, "it to be my sworn duty to take all steps necessary to insure continuance of liberalism in our government. I believe, at the same time, that it is my duty as the head of the Democratic party to see to it that my party remains the truly liberal party in the political life of America."

In other words, Mr. Roosevelt is to judge the fundamental character of both the government and the Democratic party, and to measure them by his own conception of liberalism. There might be a voice of dissent raised here and there, even by members of his party, particularly by those brought up in the tradition of Jeffersonianism.

But what intrigued us particularly in the president's explanation was this paragraph:

But, as head of the Democratic party, I think that it is nothing more or less than political consistency for the candidates standing for election on the liberal platform of my party to act like liberals after the election is over."

For the man who ran on the platform Mr. Roosevelt ran on in 1932, who made the campaign issues he made in 1932, particularly that of government extravagance, and who performed as he performed after winning office to talk of political consistency is the height of something or other.

Morning Motto

Justice is the only worship. Love is the only priest. Ignorance is the only slavery. Happiness is the only good. The time to be happy is now. The place to be happy is here. The way to be happy is to make other people happy.—R. G. INGERSOLL.

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON
WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—This is another column about the slaughter of the innocents that is as sure as sunrise to happen in this country as the vast war production with its arbitrary priorities goes forward into full blast. I mean the widespread destruction of the little fellow in business and the jobs of his employees.

The pressure is only beginning to be felt but the program has only started. When it gets into full swing the casualties are going to run into the tens of thousands and the justified squawking will create universal sympathy and probably universal soreness—which is bad for both unity and confidence in governmental management.

Farming out of war orders by the big fellows is just a mustard plaster, first because most of these establishments are not equipped to take them and second, because it slows production, reduces quality, increases cost and will be done with reluctance and half a heart by those under a stern responsibility for results in military and naval supply.

The problem rarely arose during World War One, because the demand was much less since this possibility had been foreseen and provided for and because much of technical military manufacture was contracted for abroad, we furnishing replacement raw material. It is all different now. We are the arsenal of democracy—including Russia and China.

It is high time before the slaughter commences to consider means to offset the destruction and the creation here of the greatest monopolistic concentration of business this country has ever known.

The bearing of this sacrifice is not like taxes, assessed on ability to pay, a principle of relative equality and leaving the bulk of small business in both manufacture and sale at least alive. Now it is literally to be wiped out on no rule of equality whatever but because government administration will simply permit these people no supplies with which to carry on their business.

It is a difficult problem but not without its precedent. For centuries in the law of the sea there has been a principle called the "rule of general average." It has varied as among different maritime nations and at different times. It offers complications and only recently—in the last fifty years—has it become more uniform throughout the world. Still it is complicated and not to be compressed into a single principle.

Loss Is Proportioned

But generally speaking it is something like this. When a ship is in distress and some of her cargo has to be jettisoned (thrown overboard) to save the rest, or when there is a fire and the sea has to be let in on some of the cargo to keep all from being destroyed, or when the ship itself has to be run ashore to prevent loss of the whole cargo and in several similar circumstances, the loss to the owners of the destroyed freight is not permitted to fall solely upon its owners. An attempt is made to average the loss over all of the owners of all the cargo saved by this sacrifice of the owners of the destroyed cargo.

It seems to me that the principle and its application are very similar to the misfortune we are about to meet and that thought should be immediately given to this or some other application of the ancient rule of justice to the brand new circumstances in which we are bound to find ourselves.

There is a dangerous, if slowly rising, resentment growing up in this country already over the airy, unplanned and arbitrary application of harsh sacrificial laws by men untrained in their application and apparently needless of their destructive effects. Can't this administration ever learn to act in time to avert or cushion unnecessary and unfair war burdens?

An Excellent Appointment

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

Appointment of John J. Forbes, of Pittsburgh, supervising engineer of the safety division of the United States Bureau of Mines, as chief inspector of the bureau, to supervise activities under the new Federal coal mine inspection act, is recognition of outstanding ability.

Mr. Forbes, who is well known to Fayette and Westmoreland county mining men, brings to his new post approximately thirty years of experience as a mining engineer and as an exponent of mine safety. He started mining as a breaker boy in the anthracite region when 10 years old, and until he joined the Bureau of Mines staff twenty-six years ago had worked in various capacities in mines of Pennsylvania and Ohio.

A veteran "smoke eater" and expert mine rescuer, Mr. Forbes has participated in mine rescue and recovery operations and in investigation work during the past twenty-five years at approximately 100 mine disasters, his official duties taking him to nearly every one in the Pennsylvania-Ohio-West Virginia area. He has visited metal and non-metal mines, as well as coal mines, in every mining state in the Union and, in some states, has been in virtually every mine. He has made investigations of coal mines in Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, Washington, and California. He knows his job.

Distorted Speech And Hysteria Must Be Avoided

From the Pittsburgh Press

Freedom of speech is one of the finest and most precious of American privileges and traditions. It is not only a priceless heritage, it is a practical asset. It is in the interest of all the people.

It has become more and more prized in this country as we have seen it first restricted, then sabotaged and finally stamped out altogether in European countries.

Freedom of speech frequently is abused in this country, especially in politics. Politicians, particularly in election campaigns, carelessly and often wilfully distort facts and situations.

But even this freedom has its merit. It often brings to light facts that otherwise might be suppressed. It often leads to an analysis that otherwise might be overlooked.

The American people, as a whole, are remarkably able to dissect the bunk from the truth.

Hysteria Harmful

In these times of crisis, with sharp differences of opinion on the best policy to preserve America—and with its own precious freedom of speech—it is natural, and perhaps only human, that hysteria should take root.

But these are times when, rather than ever, it is necessary that ward off hysteria, that we curb our emotions.

If we are to preserve our freedom of speech, then it must be enjoyed with a solemn respect. To keep speech free, it must be kept sane.

It was a blow to freedom of speech when Senator Burton K. Wheeler was egged the other night when he addressed an America First Committee meeting in Billings, Mont.

And it was a blow to freedom of speech when Charles A. Lindbergh refused the use of auditoriums in some places.

What Senator Wheeler said in Billings is true:

"Some ardent interventionists, some blood-thirsty war mongers, who demand that we fight for the four freedoms, deny, or approve the denial, of free speech to Colonel Lindbergh in the United States."

Fanatics on Both Sides

But it also is true that some ardent isolationists, some reckless Roosevelt-haters and fomenters of racial hatreds, who demand that we pull in our horns, look up our shoulders and ignore the flames which are destroying the world, deny, or approve the denial, of free speech to those who believe we must adopt an opposite policy if we are to save ourselves.

There are fanatics on both sides who want freedom of speech for themselves alone.

Freedom of speech is for all Americans, high and low, rich and poor, isolationist and interventionist. The moment it becomes restricted, the moment it is on the road to oblivion.

Concentrating The Sting

From the Christian Science Monitor

Two states, Colorado and Michigan, this year have reduced the number of their tax-collecting agencies from four to three. New states still scatter their tax-collecting function among four offices and two—Wyoming and Missouri—have five and six such offices respectively.

Seven American states have consolidated their taxing agencies completely into one office. These, according to the Public Administration Clearing House, are Georgia, Kentucky, New York, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Utah.

This unification is really a service to the taxpayer. He may not like taxes but he can plan his budget better if he knows the worst at one than if his tax bills are coming from several directions and at various times through the year.

The collector for Arlington county, Virginia, opposite the city of Washington, sends out at the beginning of the year a consolidated form on which the citizen can make his returns for all state and local taxes for the year—real estate, personal property, income, poll tax, and so forth. Later the tax bills arrive in one envelope. This procedure is to be commended to other municipalities and to states.

A Policy Is Reversed

From the Altoona, Pa., Tribune

Not so many years ago the administration farm policy was a curtail production of farm products. Hogs were slaughtered and quotas placed on certain products.

Now the administration is asking American farmers to step up production of most essential foods to a record high next year in order to assure adequate supplies for home consumption and for sending abroad to nations resisting aggression.

Agriculture Secretary Wickard called particularly for expanded production of hogs, eggs, milk, cheese and chickens.

Still to be held in check will be the production of commodities of which the nation already has large reserves. Wheat, cotton and tobacco are among these.

Slowly but surely the farm policy is being reversed. It has always been an ironic paradox that in a land of plenty there is need for proper foodstuffs among a great number of people. Solution of the problem for all time would be the of the greatest economic contributions to the history of mankind.

HOTEL REPLACES IRON GRATING WITH CONCRETE TO PROTECT BASEMENT

A concrete pavement is being laid at the Fort Cumberland hotel to replace the iron grating as a precaution against heavy rains and high water which have done considerable damage to the basement of the building on numerous occasions.

The improvements being made at the hotel also include the installation of a ventilating system for the basement.

The Fort Cumberland property is located at the lowest point in the downtown area and high water in the past always has found its way into the basement through the open grating on Baltimore and Liberty streets.

Hotel attaches said that the cloudburst of July 7 was the "last straw" and directors moved to correct a condition that has existed for years. Heavy damage was caused when the heavy rain overflowed the curb and poured into the basement to a depth of ten feet.

Meat Cutter Loses Decision To Bull

It's a grave social error to play with the bull's tail. Proof is furnished by John R. Dorsey, meat cutter for Wolfe's Meat Market, who attempted to crank up a bull in Wolfe's slaughter house on Monday, and was immediately flattened by what Dorsey described as a "terrific kick in the ribs."

It seems that Dorsey attempted to make the bull move. First he used a pitchfork and when that failed to bring a response he began yanking on the bull's tail. The bull turned its head, and then gave Dorsey the heave ho by planting both of his feet in the meat cutter's ribs, putting him down for the count.

Dorsey showed up at the meat market yesterday nursing three sore ribs.

Wagman, told the Lovelless jury that they should bring in an unqualified verdict, allowing the court to set the sentence.

Reminding O'Connor that these jurors might feel the rest of their lives that they perhaps did the wrong thing, James said he also had three petitions asking clemency signed by 285 Washington county residents.

He had not brought these petitions to the hearing, but said he would forward them to Annapolis for the governor's attention.

After David W. Sloan of Cumberland, also counsel for Lovelless, presented several letters, Lewis M. Wilson of Cumberland, attorney for Miller, gave O'Connor a petition signed by six of the Miller jurors within a few hours yesterday afternoon.

All Willing To Sign

Wilson declared he was assured by four of the six he had time to contact that the other jurors, all of whom lived some distance from Wilson's home, would be willing to sign the petition.

Wilson outlined the background of the boys "brought up in a Tobacco Road family," without friends, without money, with education that went only to the third grade.

Omar Kaylor of Hagerstown, second attorney appointed by the court to act for Miller at his trial, said:

"It has been my misfortune to be appointed by the court in Washington county to five different murder cases. In every case the verdict was guilty. In every case the sentence was life imprisonment. . . . There is no more reason here for the death penalty than in the other cases, all of which involved mature men."

First in 50 Years

Kaylor asserted the Allegany court understood the unqualified verdict was a mandate for death and acted accordingly. Yet, he said, "not in fifty years has the death sentence been handed down there."

The jurors knew that, Kaylor asserted, and were guided away from an inclination to recommend mercy.

Washington County Sheriff Roy Baker, E. J. Chapman, of Hagerstown, Western Maryland railroad detective, and Sgt. J. J. Cassidy of state police headquarters in Baltimore were present. They led the investigation into the slaying of Poffenberger, one-time Washington county commissioner.

Asked by James "if the governor saw fit to change the death sentence to life, would you have any objections?" Chapman answered that he would not. Voluntarily, he said he felt there was "some good in Lovelless."

Five Deeds Filed For Record Here

Five deeds, three mortgages, two chattel mortgages and forty-four conditional sales contracts were filed for record yesterday in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson.

Deeds included: Kathleen Adams Wagner, executrix of the will of Annie M. Adams, to Georgia Adams Miller, Pauline Adams Felty and Kathleen Adams Wagner, properties on Harrison street and Altamont Terrace.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Lippold to Frank B. Vandegrift, property on Bedford street.

THE DAILY STORY

AS YOU SEW

Jack Was a Smart Boy, but Mary Was One Girl He Could Not Figure Out Even when She Gave Him All the Clues

By ATHLYN DESHAIS

Jack, the boy at the drugstore, fixed Mary Murphy's soda happily. Some day he wanted to be a reporter so that he could have a life packed with tensely, excitement and glamour, just like hers. Mary's eyes were gazing off into space tonight, but they had an awfully satisfied look.

"Who—or whom—did you see, that you will glorify in public print

Mary gave him a strange smile and pulled a slip of paper out of her pocket. "I'll let you guess what I did today," she teased. "Here, Jack. Here's a slip of paper with my list of things I could have done today."

She tossed the paper at him. "Go on. Guess which one I did." He read: "Airport—luncheon—followed by four-hour flight over Illinois with celebrities stopping for day, en route to Rockies. Industrialists, economists and so on."

We Wanted to be a Reporter

tomorrow? It was the same question that Jack always asked Mary. His eyes were popping, because he really wanted to know.

She didn't sip, just toyed with her straw. "I had to make a choice. Four feature stories presented themselves. I think I selected the right one." She had a look of abstraction, and then suddenly came to life. "I know I did!"

The boy waited expectantly. When she didn't say anything, and just concentrated on the concoction in her glass, he grew impatient. "Well, come on, Murph, tell me. I know it was exciting. I can tell by your eyes. Besides, La Murphy's stories are always fun. She wouldn't go on them if they weren't."

"Second item: Golf lesson for 'how not to play it' series. Visiting pros scheduled to be present, all champs. Good for several stories."

"Item three: Opening of swanky new resort hotel. Concert tea, with a sprinkling of lesser lights among opera stars."

"Item four: Mrs. Marble, matron at near-by orphanage for last 25 years, entertaining the War Mothers at an afternoon social."

Jack leaned back against the shelves of shining glassware and gave a long, mean whistle. "You kill me, Murph. You—at a War Mothers' meeting. Sitting around with a lot of old hens. Nothin' ever happens to them." He accentuated the last word. "Well, item four is out—definitely."

"Go on," commanded Mary. She dug her spoon into the mound of ice cream at the bottom of her glass. The bandaged forefinger of her left hand stood out noticeably.

Jack saw it for the first time, and pounced upon its suggestion as being a good clue. "I know, I know," he exulted. "You took a golf lesson! You always have to bandage your hands when you come back from those sessions cause you're such a dope about gripping the club like crazy. Let's see the inside of your paw."

She held it out for his inspection. He shook his head. "Nope. That can't be it. The blisters would be in the palm, not just on one finger."

"Well, lessee. That leaves items one and three."

"Item one—flying trip. Naw. You weren't up today. You don't look dizzy enough. Every time you've ever come back from a flight you've had that glazed look, as though you still had cotton in the ears. But still—hey—you do look remote, kind of. Maybe that's it."

He studied her. "Uh-uh. That ain't it. You'd be wearing that hotcha green suit. The one you reserve for special occasions. Can't tell me you went flying around with a bunch of big boys—not in that corny, little girl outfit you've got on."

Mary grinned. "Nice reasoning, Jack, up to a certain point. See this bandaged finger?"

"We've already discussed it," he said, stiffly.

"Not enough. I ran a knitting needle into it this afternoon."

"What were you doing with a knitting needle?"

"Knitting." She said it solemnly.

Then she lowered her voice and spoke slowly. "I wonder if you can understand, Jack, that I chose to do the story that I considered, wrongly though, a strictly magnanimous gesture. Usually I'm the one who gets the fun out of an assignment. Today I thought it would be nice to be on the giving end."

"Yes, Jack, I went to Mrs. Marble's party for the War Mothers. Sure, I thought they'd get a kick out of the presence of gaiety and youth—yeah, meaning me."

"But it didn't work out that way. I found myself on the receiving end in emotional excitement. This Mrs. Marble had a husband who died in France. For 25 years she's worked to raise her son. Today, just before the party, he came to kiss her good-bye. He's gone now to an army camp. She's going to keep on working. She has to."

"Kind of a bitter pill for her, isn't it?" asked Jack.

"Not for her. Do you know what she said? She said: 'You might say to me, Miss Murphy, that we fought in vain. I don't believe it. I've just said good-bye to my son. I'm proud. I feel that it's men like my son, and his father, who make this life for us.'"

Jack started to mop the soda fountain, and without letting his eyes meet hers he said, "I guess I understand, Murph."

SYNOPSIS
Leaving New York for Miami to marry again.
HALLIE SINGLETON, a fashion model, reminisces about the time, six years before, when she was only 21 years old and had just met ERIC ADAMS, a young would-be actor. She remembers how SHEILA SHERMAN, a chorus girl and friend of Eric's, appeared on the scene.

YESTERDAY: Eric tears up a thank-you note that Hallie had written to his brother, Win.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

IT WAS Toby and Sue who took Hallie to dinner the night Eric's play opened, because Eric was having a bite in his dressing room. Toby had seen to it that it was a gala dinner, reserving a table at a fashionable restaurant, arriving in top hat and tails to call for the girls at Hallie's apartment.

"Beans or truffles," Hallie said breathlessly. "I wouldn't know the difference, I'm that excited. Just think, if I'd married one of the boys in Worburn, I'd never know this breathless thrill. To be dining with my best friends, dressed in my party clothes, going to see my husband in his first important Broadway role! And after the play, we're all to go backstage and meet the cast. Imagine my meeting Sara Cornell in person!"

Toby lifted his glass: "To a life of breathless thrill which will, I hope, prove as good as what the boys in Worburn have to offer!"

Hallie drank the toast, with laughter mingled with the bubbles in her glass. She didn't know how sincere that toast was.

It was Hallie's first experience attending a First Night on Broadway and it was an experience as heady as the champagne in which the three had toasted its success.

It was a warm, early October night, but there were as many shawls and ermines and silver fox as if it had been winter. Hallie was blinded with the glitter of rubies and diamonds and emeralds, and she thought there couldn't have been an orchid left in a flower shop in all New York.

In the crowd, as they wended their way through the noisy, perfumed lobby, she recognized three movie stars, and Toby pointed out celebrity after celebrity to her. All the first-string critics were there. To see Eric, she thought proudly.

She could hardly bear the moment of waiting as the house lights dimmed and the curtain rose slowly. It was some few minutes before Eric made his entrance. When he did, he became—for her—not the second least important member of the cast, but the center of her very being.

Eric was a guest on the house party which was the background of the play. He had several lines—"sides," he called them—which, though of little importance, he did with poise and adequacy. He did all there was to be done with them, but there just wasn't enough to have the critics mention him. This didn't really matter; what mattered was that the play would be a success. This, Toby assured her as they went backstage, through the boxes when the play was over, was certainly a success. He'd heard the critics' opinions in the lobby between acts.

Hallie had become acquainted with backstage scenes during the rehearsal and she'd met most of the members of the cast, but not the great Sara Cornell. And Cornell was talking to Eric when Toby and Sue and Hallie found them.

Eric drew her forward diffidently and said, "Miss Cornell, may I present my wife?"

Hallie was conscious of two pairs of eyes on her—the great dark eyes of the actress—swiftly encompassing her in her simple little gray chiffon evening frock, and of Eric's eyes, a trifle anxious.

The actress said, "Did you like it?"

Hallie answered, "The play? I don't know. The woman that Gerta was"—Gerta was the Cornell role—"is completely foreign to me, but if I'd known her in real life and she was as you played her, I should have been swept away, completely enthralled by her, as I was by your performance."

Sara Cornell patted her hand.

Eric drew her forward diffidently and said, "Miss Cornell, may I present my wife?"

"You're intelligent, my dear. I didn't like her myself when I read her."

Someone called to her, but before she left the young Adamses, Cornell said, "I'm having some people to tea Sunday. I want you both to come."

Eric's eyes were no longer anxious when Hallie looked at him. They were proud. He whispered, "That's a god-awful dress, honey, but you've got stuff."

Eric was proud of her. He must be proud of her on Sunday. She dressed carefully, wearing her light green tweed suit, and the soft sweater and little riding felt that were the same shade. Her chamois gloves were spotless and her alligator brogues smartly polished when she presented herself to her husband, saying, "Will I do?"

"You look like a school girl home for the holidays, but it will do," he pronounced.

There were at least 40 people at Sara Cornell's apartment. Other actresses, two playwrights of whom Hallie had heard, a group of newspaper people, a millionaire famous for her winning smile, a concert pianist. Everyone famous for something, Hallie thought, except the Adamses.

But it was to Hallie that Sara Cornell talked longest.

Later Eric asked eagerly what they had talked about.

"French dressing and . . . Oh, just things. She's a very warm person. We liked each other. You know it's easy to talk when you like each other."

Eric said, "Have I mentioned before that I never knew anyone like you?"

"Um hum," she said.

"We'll probably be invited there again. It's awfully good business for me to know the big-wigs. I'll really get somewhere that way. Show business, you know, is different from any other business."

"Is it?" Hallie asked. "I thought insurance men and lawyers and manufacturers always wanted to know the big-wigs in their profession, too."

"Hallie, you astound me."

But Hallie was not through astounding him. Quite casually she said, "Yes, I expect we might be invited there again. Miss Cornell is coming to have tea with me one day."

Eric threw away his unlighted cigar without realizing what he was doing. He whistled a long, low whistle. "That's progress, baby. Next week we'll invite Queen Mary."

to dinner. How do you do it?"

"I didn't DO anything. She said she'd like to see me again. That there were lots of things we must talk about. So I said that I knew she was pretty busy, but I should like to have her come to tea one afternoon when she's free. That's the way it's done in Worburn, dear."

"Worburn, yes," he said thoughtfully.

He was thoughtful all the rest of the way home in the bus. When they were in their own apartment, he looked around it as if he were seeing it for the first time. He looked a little surprised to find it so satisfactory. The low spreading light from the lamps was warm and cheerful. The bright-colored book covers in the shelves, and the pots of growing green things in the glass and wrought-iron stand housed against the window were charming.

Hallie said, "Are you seeing it with Miss Cornell in it? Isn't it all right?"

"It's swell, honey. Perfect. But I don't see you rushing into the kitchen to fix a tea tray, tearing back here, and then rushing back to the kitchen for a pitcher of hot water."

Hallie sat down on her crimson lounge and laughed at him. "Maybe we could have tea in the kitchen," she said. "Or perhaps Miss Cornell and I could take turns filling the pitcher."

"I'm really serious about this, Hallie."

Hallie felt a thread of irritation growing in her. She said, "Eric, we might hire a butler, but where I come from, it's considered not quite the thing to do to pretend to have what you haven't got. That may be all right for the tinsel theater world, but it doesn't go with me."

Eric ruffled her hair. "You're in the 'tinsel theater world' now, baby. Remember, it's good to follow the when-you're-in-Rome formula. That Worburn stuff is all right in its place, but it isn't here."

Hallie smoothed her hair and went into the bedroom.

Eric's voice followed her in: "I want you to hire a maid tomorrow. Something smart and neat, no little slattern from Harlem."

Hallie put down her hair brush and opened her mouth to speak. After a moment, she said, "All right, dear. I'll get her a taffeta uniform, white organdie frilled aprons, and you can pay for sheer black stockings. We'll get her, but I don't know what she'll do to our budget."

Age nor Birthday Can Stop the Work Of Charles Paugh

Celebrates Eighty-Third Anniversary by Hauling Mail

Rowlesburg, W. Va., Sept. 23 (AP)—On his eighty-third birthday Charles ("Jug") Paugh hitched his pony, Topsy, to the odd little wagon with the big wheels in the rear and the small wheels in front, drove to the Baltimore and Ohio station, piled the wagon high with mail sacks and hauled them to the Rowlesburg postoffice.

Every week day for nineteen years he's been doing that, so the birthday on September 15 was no exception, even though most folk feel that a man who has reached the age of eighty-three needs a little vacation.

But Charles Paugh carries his years lightly. He enjoys excellent health (unimpaired by sixty-nine years of pipe smoking), eyesight so good he doesn't have to bother with glasses even when reading the daily newspaper and a disposition so happy he is the friend of all the children and can smile when it's raining the hardest.

Born September 15, 1858, at Cheat Bridge, Preston county, he was only a small boy at the time of the Civil war, but he recalls, he says, when the Union army tore up the floor of the now historic bridge across Cheat river to halt the Confederates; when droves of cattle and turkeys were taken over the old Northwestern turnpike, now Route 50, to the eastern markets; when stage coaches clattered past his home.

Moving to Rowlesburg in 1876, he worked for a while for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, then op-

Scientists Find Hearing Explains Sixth Sense of Those Who Are Blind

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
No one can watch a bat, as I did last night, flying in the twilight of the garden without noticing again its remarkable ability to avoid obstacles. It swoops around at no mean rate of speed, headed dead on for the limb of a tree, or the side of the garage, and at the last split second looms up and away. What sense guides it? Not sight entirely. A scientist fitted up a room with heavy cross wires, and released a bat into it in total darkness, but the bat flew around and avoided collision with all the wires. Hearing, is the answer of science. Bats emit sound tones in flight of 50,000 vibrations per second—too high for human hearing. These reflect from obstacles in their path and guide them. Like aviators, bats come in on the beam—an auditory beam. We hear of the "sixth sense."

the "warning sense" of the blind in avoiding obstacles. What is it? The bat's method gives us a hint, according to Dr. Karl M. Dallenbach, professor of psychology at Cornell, before the General Electric Science Forum, described in "Science and Discovery" for September.

In testing a group of blind people and a group with normal vision who were to be blindfolded, the blind expressed confidence before-hand that they could tell when an obstacle was in the path, the seeing ones were not so sure. In order to have a definite unit of measurement of this ability, they were asked to walk up to a blank wall. The exact distance when they stopped and began to sense its presence could be used as an accurate comparison of sixth sense ability.

The spot where they stopped when they first perceived the presence of the wall was put down as one figure. Then they were told to walk further until they were as close as possible without coming into contact with the wall. The first distance divided by the second gave the ratio used as a standard.

Hearing Guided Them
At first the ones with normal vision would stop at twenty feet from the wall, giving a very low ratio, but they soon learned and acquired as good a ratio as the blind subjects.

Some of them thought they detected the wall by pressure sensations in the skin of the face and hands. These were eliminated by a veil of heavy felt to cover the face without coming into contact with it. Wearing this, the groups perceived the wall as accurately as before.

Then hearing was tested by plugging up the ears, leaving the face uncovered with the exception of the blindfolds. This destroyed their sixth sense entirely. In 400 trials both blind and those with normal vision ran into the wall every time when the ears were stopped.

So the blind's sixth sense turns out to be hearing. "The subjects were able to avoid the wall when

Questions and Answers
G. G. M.:—"I can't drink our water so I drink pop instead. Is too much pop harmful and is it fattening? Is it harmful for a boy four years old to have any coffee every morning? I can't get him away from it."

Answer—Pop does no special harm. All pop contains sugar and to that extent is fattening. In my opinion, four years is too young for children to be drinking coffee.

The accident occurred near Brownsville, about 7 o'clock. According to Green's story, he attempted to make a turn into a gas station. The motorcycle, said to have been traveling at considerable speed, suddenly appeared and collided with his machine before he could get out of its way. The motorcycle immediately burst into flames and was completely destroyed. The rider, a 23-year-old youth from Brownsville, whose name was not learned, had both legs and both arms broken and suffered other injuries. He was taken to a Union-town hospital. Green and Bower escaped with minor bruises but damage to Green's car was estimated at approximately $100. Blame for the accident had not as yet been definitely fixed, but the local men went to Brownsville today in connection with the matter.

Sixteenth Big Year For Joan Leslie

If she lives to be 90, or 100, Joan Leslie never will forget the year she was "sweet sixteen."

Miss Leslie still has several months to live of that year. A lot of exciting things are scheduled to happen to her during those months, including the experience of being Errol Flynn's movie sweetheart. Enough already has happened, however, to make the year a stand-out in any woman's memory.

"Sweet sixteen" started out with a boom for the golden-red haired beauty. At high noon on January 26, her birthday, Miss Leslie was summoned to the banquet room in the Warner Bros. studio commissary. She thought she'd been called to carve a birthday cake and receive the thanks of the Southern California All Year Club, the booster organization for which she'd been acting as Sun Goddess.

She did carve the cake, and get the thanks. She also got news that left her breathless. She was told she was to play the leading feminine role, Gary Cooper's sweetheart, in "Sergeant York," the biggest picture on the company's production schedule, which is now at the Strand theater.

Joan hadn't been sixteen quite two weeks when she was kissed by Cooper.

RETURN OF A WAR HERO

Gary Cooper as "Sergeant York" is welcomed back home after his heroic war exploits, by lovely Joan Leslie, as Grace Williams, the girl who later becomes York's wife. "Sergeant York" is now at the Strand theater.

Tracy Scores Again In First Dual Role

Once again Spencer Tracy proves his right to his place as a two-time Academy Award winner with his portrayal of that favorite of fiction, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Sharing honors with the star in the new picture, currently playing at the Maryland theater, are Ingrid Bergman and Lana Turner.

Surprise of the M-G-M production is the casting against type of the two leading ladies. Contrary to expectations, Lana Turner is the sedate Beatrix Emery, and Ingrid Bergman the little barroom entertainer, Ivy Peterson. Both prove their versatility in the unusual roles. One of the highlights of the drama is Miss Bergman singing "You Should See Me Dance the Polka" to the befuddled Mr. Hyde. Miss Turner, in her best role to date, proves herself a front-rank performer.

But it is Tracy's performance which dominates the film. Admirable in his restraint, Tracy resorts to no gargantuan make-up to denote his transformation from the good Dr. Jekyll into the evil Mr. Hyde. With a minimum of facial horror, the star achieves his personality change through change of expression.

The Robert Louis Stevenson novel tells the story of young Dr. Jekyll, scientist interested in man's dual personality. He believes that in all men are good and evil. In some evil predominates over the good, in others the reverse is true. Over the objections of friends, colleagues and sweetheart, Jekyll continues his experiments in this field. He drinks the resulting potion. It is then his evil asserts itself and he becomes Mr. Hyde.

U. S. Navy Strength Shown in New Film

Fifty million dollars worth of fighting airplanes make up the background for a single motion picture scene — one bright shot for Errol Flynn's new starring picture "Dive Bomber," made by Warner Bros. at the U. S. Naval Air Base, San Diego and now showing at the Liberty theater.

Most of the planes were the huge PB4Y Consolidated bombers. Others were interceptors, torpedo bombers, dive bombers, and plane carrier craft with folding wings.

Because of mounting requests to know exactly what his studio is like, Walt Disney has used his new streamlined Hollywood plant as the background of action in his current full-length production, "The Reluctant Dragon," coming to the Liberty.

The picture brings something new to screen entertainment combining, as it does, two great mediums: Actual motion picture photography and animation. Robert Benchley is featured in the hilarious new-type of film comedy. Benchley, playing himself, is seen as a henpecked husband whose wife sends him to Walt Disney to sell the cartoon master on an idea for a story.

Embarrassed by his mission, Benchley does everything in his power to dodge Walt, once he finds himself inside the gates of the studio.

Laughs mount as he ducks from one department to another, finding himself frequently at the mercy of the wacky humor of the colorful Disney employees. Walt, himself, turns actor in "The Reluctant Dragon," as do many of his top artists and pretty girl employees.

theater tomorrow, has made more than 1,300 appearances from coast to coast since 1934.

Despite a schedule of eight pictures a year, Smiley manages to sandwich in almost 200 "one nighters" a year. He has made thirty-seven transcontinental trips and has played every state in the union except North Dakota.

In the course of a year the rotund western comedian wears out two brand new cars as his mileage on his tours aggregates in the neighborhood of 100,000 miles, which is equivalent to two full trips around the world.

The comedian has presented his stage show to six million western fans, young and old, and is so much in demand for personal appearances that he wishes he had the proverbial nine lives of a cat.

McCrea and Drew Stars of Comedy

Bringing together Joel McCrea and Ellen Drew for the first time as a romantic starring team, Paramount's new comedy with thrills, "Reaching for the Sun," arrives today at the Garden theater.

A tale of the adventures and comic misadventures of a Michigan backwoodsman on the assembly line of a Detroit automobile plant, and his romance with a lunch wagon waitress, who sometimes doubles as a dance hall hostess, the new film was produced and directed by William A. Wellman, who has earned a reputation for his skill in blending comedy with exciting drama.

English novelist H. De Vere Stacpoole's famous story, "The Man

Who Lost Himself," now in screen form, is proving a hilarious bit of comedy in the unusual picture of now playing at the Garden.

Yanks Advantage In World Series

Keystone Combine of Gordon and Rizzuto Gives New York Edge

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, Sept. 23. (AP)—The biggest advantage the New York Yankees will have as they roll into the World Series next week will be their infield.

There isn't a keystone combination in baseball that compares with second baseman Joe Gordon and shortstop Phil Rizzuto of the American League champions.

Both the Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals have good, hard-hitting inner pairs. The Dodgers have a strong right side, with this year's best first baseman, Dom Camilli, and a fine second baseman, Billy Herman. The Cardinals are strongest at second, Hank Cresspi, and at third, Jim Brown.

Yankees Have Balance

But neither of the National League rivals can match the balance and smoothness of the Yankees.

This is all the more interesting because at the start of the season the infield was the Yanks' most vulnerable weakness. They opened the season with Gordon and Rizzuto, who played with his rookie sidekick, Harry Priddy, at second. Manager Joe McCarthy shook up his inner circle in mid-May. From that time the Yanks gained momentum.

Gordon was glad to get back to the old stand and proved it by having his best year. He does tricks in the field no other player can match.

Camilli has been the key to the success of Rizzuto, a stocky, working-eyed youngster who very definitely is one of the rookies of the year.

Camilli Sparks Dodgers
The kinship of Brooklyn's infield to the entire team, in fact—is Camilli. He is the National League leader in both home runs, thirty-three, and runs batted in, 118. Because he is a power at the plate, Camilli is a slick fielder.

Herman, who played in three World Series with the Chicago Cubs, is just about the best second baseman in the National League. He is a little past his prime, but still a person to be reckoned with.

Harold (Peewee) Reese, shortstop in the last few weeks has dropped into the sore spot of Brooklyn's infield. He is a game kid but the pressure has been heavy and he has errors at crucial points have been costly.

Third base is the real strength of the Cards' infield. Brown not only is a .311 hitter, a perfect lead-off man, and a dependable fielder, but he is a dynamo who keeps the other players keyed up.

Johnny Mize, has not been hitting good year in spite of his .317 average. Right now he is hurt, but he is expected to be ready for the series, the Cards are in it.

Senators Extend Winning Streak

4 to 3 Victory over Boston Sox

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—A four-run inning in the ninth gave the Senators a 4-3 decision over Boston today for the Senators' sixth straight victory.

Pinch-hitter Buddy Lewis drew a walk to open the final frame and lead to second when George Case bled, Roger Cramer singled to left center, scoring Lewis, and Case and home when Don DiMaggio singled the ball.

Jack Wilson went to the mound for Boston in the seventh when Joe Mauer pulled a shoulder muscle. Hudson was charged with the loss.

Hudson went the route for Washington. The boxscore:

Executive Clemency Urged for Slayers By 15 of 24 Jurors

Four Attorneys Battle for Lives of Pair Convicted Here; Governor O'Connor Reserves Decision

BALTIMORE, Sept. 23. (AP)—Basing an appeal on the contention that the jury which brought unqualified first degree murder verdicts against Earl Loveless and James Lee Miller labored under misconceptions, four attorneys battled today for the lives of the two men.

The lawyers, acting on their own initiative, asked Governor O'Connor to commute to life terms the sentences of death imposed by the Allegheny circuit court. They admitted they had no new evidence but presented petitions for executive clemency signed by fifteen of the twenty-four jurors involved.

Deadline Nears

The hour and fifteen minute hearing was held in the governor's Baltimore office less than sixty hours before the two brothers-in-law are scheduled to hang for the pipe-fitter slaying of Raleigh Poffenberger, 76-year-old Keedysville farmer.

At the hearing's end, O'Connor said:

"I realize the final decision must rest with me. I shall very carefully consider the request and shall read over and study over this evening all the matters presented to me."

E. Austin James of Frederick, counsel for Loveless, opened the pleas for clemency.

Reviewing the case, he asserted, "I can't see why a boy of 22 like Loveless, when he had so many opportunities to rob Poffenberger, would resort to physical violence."

Guilt in Doubt

Though there was no new evidence and though the trial and verdict were fair, James said, there was doubt of the guilt of Loveless. The Frederick attorney, asserting he had something which should cause the governor great concern, said he had written each of the Loveless jurors, offering to convey to the governor any message they might have.

He then presented a letter from Juror Joseph R. Stark of Frostburg recommending life imprisonment "which would give Loveless more time to make his peace with God."

Another letter from Sol Widman of Cumberland stated:

"The jury considered seriously recommending mercy and would have done so if they had not felt satisfied in their own minds that they (the pair) would not be sentenced to death."

James said he had talked to Widman, then drawn up a petition to the governor which was signed by nine of the twelve jurors in the Loveless trial, saying that if they had to sit again they would vote for a mercy recommendation.

Unqualified Verdict Urged

James said he was unable to reach one of the three who failed to sign.

Counsel contended Washington county State's Attorney Charles P. (Continued on Page 7, Col. 4)

Beekeepers Win $57 in Premiums At Hagerstown

J. H. Lindner and Son Cop $34; Klavuhns Take Awards of $22

Cumberland beekeepers shared $56 in cash awards in the beautiful exhibit yesterday at the Hagerstown Fair and agricultural exhibit.

Leading the Cumberland winners were John H. Lindner and his son, James, of Shade's Lane, who captured a total of $34 in cash premiums.

The elder Lindner won $15 for second place for the best display, annexed a $5 first prize for beeswax, a third prize of $2 for twenty-four jars of light extracted honey, a second award of $4 for six dark sections of comb honey and third place premium of $2 for twenty-four jars of dark extracted honey.

James Lindner took the $6 first prize for twenty-four jars of light extracted honey.

Peter M. Klavuhn, 615 Yale street, was awarded second prize of $6 for twenty-four jars of light extracted honey while his son Daniel took third prize of $10 for display and first premium of $6 for six sections of dark comb honey. The Klavuhns captured $22 in cash premiums.

George Rhodes, his wife and son, Williamsport, Md., won first, second and third prizes, amounting to $12, for six light sections of comb honey. Rhodes took the top award of $20 for best display in the show and also annexed $2 second prize for beeswax.

George Abrams, of the University of Maryland Extension Service, College Park, was the presiding judge.

Brice Hollow Road Work Is Completed

Flintstone-Spring Gap Highway Now Completely Hard-Surfaced

Hard-surfacing of the Brice Hollow road is now complete, the county commissioners were told yesterday by County Engineer John H. Carscaden.

Completion of the six-mile stretch between Spring Gap and Twiggstown means that the entire length of the Spring Gap-Flintstone road is now hard-surfaced.

Work on the project was begun three years ago by WPA, which had three miles completed when WPA work was suspended, July 1. The remaining three miles, on which WPA had, of course, done preliminary work, was completed by the county road crew, with the exception of a few finishing touches.

Carscaden said that he hopes to begin work soon on the unfinished section of the Pinto road.

Other road news received by the commissioners yesterday was to the effect that repairs to the interstate bridge between Luke and Piedmont had been completed. The communication, from the West Virginia State Roads Commission, asked that the commissioners inspect the bridge for final approval before the contractor is released.

The board decided to visit the site Friday afternoon, accompanied by Carscaden and Maryland State Roads Commission engineers.

Celanese Union Demands Heard By Mediators

Company Views To Be Presented Today in Washington Conference

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—The demands of a CIO Textile Workers union local at Cumberland, Md., for a new agreement with the Celanese Corporation to provide a union shop and wage increases were placed before government mediators today by union spokesmen.

Officials of the U. S. Conciliation Service, which invited both the corporation and the union to carry on their negotiations here with government aid, said a panel of federal mediators spent most of today's session with the union.

Tomorrow the three-man panel headed by Conciliator James J. Spillane will talk with company representatives and obtain their views for the new contract.

The union delegation is headed by George A. Meyers, president of the Cumberland local, and Herbert W. Payne, international vice-president of the TWUA.

The company representatives are headed by Matthew H. O'Brien of New York, counsel for the corporation.

SOUTH CUMBERLAND FORMS NEW CLUB FOR BOYS UNDER 18

A club for boys under eighteen who are interested in athletics and club activities was organized last evening by a committee composed of Dr. Harold S. Malin, Joseph Petwell, George Tietrich and Frank O'Donnell. The club will be called The South End Juniors' Athletic Association.

When the club opens an 'open house' will be held.

Plans for the winter activities were discussed and it was decided to hold shuffle board, ping-pong, and volleyball tournaments. A junior and senior basketball league will also be formed. Possible club rooms were also discussed, and it was decided to build the club to a 500 membership.

Final plans will be made at a meeting which will be held at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Y. M. I. hall, Virginia avenue.

Dust Interfering With Education

Dust is interfering with education in the Little Orleans section, the county commissioners heard yesterday.

The board received a letter from Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools, declaring that the dust on the Little Orleans road was becoming a problem at the Pine Plains school. He asked that the section in front of the school, at least, be oiled.

The commissioners ordered the matter referred to Douglas P. LeFevre, maintenance engineer for the state roads commission.

Bad Check Warning Is Sounded by Chamber

Coincident with a general warning to the public against being "suckers," the chamber of commerce yesterday warned of the possibility that a "bad check artist" may be going operations here.

Harold W. Smith, chamber secretary, said that he had information that a man giving a Washington address and posing as a representative of well-known meat concerns had been operating in Wheeling, Pittsburgh and Clarksburg and might be on his way here.

U. S. Must Decide War Objectives, Chinese Asserts

Embassy Attache Says It Would End Existing Perplexities

Perplexity over the war objectives of the United States should be ended as soon as possible, in the opinion of Victor K. Wong, attache of the Chinese Embassy in Washington.

Existing difficulties making for confusion and uncertainty, Kwong said in addressing the local Rotary club yesterday at the Fort Cumberland hotel, stem from our attempt to accomplish war objectives under peace-time conditions. Peace-time laws are handicapping the effort, he said.

Confusion obtains here, Kwong declared, because many Americans are asking why all the war-time preparations and sacrifices are being made—why normal business is interrupted by priorities, diversion of manpower and the like. This has prevented the national unity so necessary for an adequate defense program.

America today stands at the cross-roads, the speaker said. It must make up its mind one way or another as to just what it proposes to do in the world war situation. Either it must be passive and continue under peace-time handicaps, or it must go into the thing on a whole-hearted, all-out basis. Either choice will bring national unity, it was asserted, but the uncertainty now obtaining with part of the people evaluating the Hitler menace as not great and the rest regarding it as alarming will prove disastrous if allowed to continue. The decision, held, should be made soon.

There is leadership at Washington, the speaker said, but it must depend upon the desires of the people. Hence, Americans should think this situation through, make up their minds and then let their leaders know their answer.

On one thing Americans are united, Kwong said, this being the determination to furnish aid in money and supplies to the nations that are resisting aggression. They cannot escape the role of protecting the Western Hemisphere.

Whatever course is decided upon, the attache said, must be carried out earnestly and intelligently. He expressed the hope that Americans would be able to see their way clearly in the very near future and thus permit the nation to act in a truly representative manner and in a way worthy of the great ideals for which America stands.

Reviews Chinese Situation

Kwong reviewed the part China has played in the war picture. His country, appreciative and fully grateful for the money and supplies given it by the United States, has aided it in resisting Japanese aggression as long and as effectively as it has. Japanese strength has been sapped until now the military menace facing the United States from the Pacific is considerably less.

While Japan yet presents a nuisance value, by forcing the United States to keep much of its fleet in the Pacific, that situation will be relieved if the United States will continue its aid to China. His country will be able to hold the Japanese in check if that aid is continued and enlarged as much as this nation is able to enlarge it, Kwong said, thus permitting maximum defensive operations in the Atlantic.

It has been said that this country won the last war but lost the peace. That was due to the straddling of the Versailles treaty, Kwong said, which was neither harsh enough on the one hand to prevent future German aggression nor sufficiently humanitarian on the other hand to guarantee the peace for which the League of Nations was designed. America must decide now, the speaker said, whether in helping to win this war it shall again lose the peace and it must be considered that this nation can play an important role in the future peace of the world.

Aid to Russia has been important, Kwong said, as Russian resistance has been a valuable factor in checking further aggression, just as the Chinese resistance over a period of four years has similarly been an important factor.

Prosecution Function of NLRB Seen of Decreasing Importance

Collective Bargaining To Become 'Norm' Soon, Jaycees Are Told

Eventual elimination of the need for prosecution of employers by the National Labor Relations Board for unfair labor practices was predicted last night by James A. Cobey, assistant regional attorney for the board at Los Angeles, in a talk at the monthly dinner-meeting of the Junior Association of Commerce at the All Ghan Shrine Country Club.

Prosecution of employers is a function of the board which is "of constantly decreasing importance," Cobey said, adding that "when collective bargaining—that is, bargaining over wages, hours and other conditions of employment—between unions and employers becomes the norm of industrial relations procedure in America as it has in Great Britain, Australia and the Scandinavian countries, the board will no longer have this function."

Local Man Takes Life with Rifle In Hotel Room

Ward Henry Johnson Described as Despondent over Rejection for Army

Despondency over his rejection for army service was blamed for the death of Ward Henry Johnson, 22-year-old bellboy, who police authorities said killed himself in his hotel room early yesterday morning.

Placing the muzzle of a rifle against his right temple, Johnson, known to his friends as "Ted," pulled the trigger just as Officer Darrell Racey opened the door. The youth, falling back across the bed, was dead when the policeman reached him.

Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy medical examiner, issued a verdict of suicide, and said that Johnson took his life with a .250 calibre rifle. Corson was assisted in the investigation by Lieut. James E. Van and Officers Racey, James J. Condon, C. C. Robey, B. F. Davis of the city police.

Attaches of the Windsor hotel, where Johnson was employed as a bellboy, said he was despondent over his rejection by examiners at the Baltimore induction station Sept. 3.

Fearing that he might harm himself and others, Charles Durbin, night clerk, asked Officer Racey, who was outside the hotel, to come and talk to the young man. Durbin added that Johnson had several guns in his room.

Followed by the clerk, Officer Racey walked to Johnson's room, and found the youth seated on the bed with the muzzle of a rifle against his temple.

As the officer said, "What are you doing, Ted?" Johnson pulled the trigger and fell across the bed dead.

Johnson had a small arsenal in his room. The weapons, including a 12 gauge double-barreled shotgun, a 410 gauge shotgun, a .250 calibre rifle and a .38 calibre revolver, are in the possession of the city police.

Harry C. Johnson, 53, father of the youth, who also lives at the hotel, collapsed when notified of his son's death and was taken to Allegheny hospital. He was released after receiving dispensary treatment.

Johnson had lived at the hotel for several months doing odd jobs and at times served as a bellboy. Mr. Johnson is also survived by his mother and two brothers, William and David Johnson, all of this city.

The body will remain at the Wolford funeral home.

Local Laboratory Will Participate In Annual Survey

Public Health Branch Here Attained High Rating in Tests Last Year

W. Arnold Gunther, bacteriologist in charge of the public health branch laboratory in the public safety building, yesterday announced that his laboratory will participate in the annual survey of the efficiency of the procedures followed in tests made for syphilis by medical and public health laboratories in the counties of Maryland.

The survey, directed by the Bureau of Bacteriology by the Maryland Department of Health, will be started the latter part of this week.

Gunther said that it will take about two months for completion and a list of the laboratories that meet the standard requirements will be published later. Certificates will be awarded to the laboratories on the approved list.

There are sixty laboratories engaged in medical or public health laboratory services in the counties of Maryland. In accordance with the state law all diagnostic laboratories, operating in the counties are required to be registered with the state department of health which is authorized to establish minimum standards for procedure in all laboratory tests.

The survey is the third to be undertaken since the law was enacted.

Attains High Rating

Local laboratories qualified as of 1941 to make serological tests for syphilis are the public health branch, in charge of W. Arnold Gunther, and the Cumberland laboratory in charge of Doris E. Gunther in the Commercial Press building.

In the survey conducted last year, the branch laboratory here received a rating of 100 per cent on specimens of blood taken from presumably non-syphilitic individuals. Specimens taken from syphilis-infected individuals showed eighty-eight per cent positive in the Eagle test and ninety-six and a half per cent with the Hinton test.

Comparative figures showed that the laboratory here rated four and one half per cent better than the research laboratory in New York city.

6,000 Tests Made in 1940

Gunther said that last year close to 6,000 tests were made in Allegheny and Garrett counties, an all-time high figure. A large number of these specimens came from physicians for diagnostic as well as control of treatment. A good percentage came from industries checking employees in conjunction with the United States public health program in eradication of the disease.

Commissioners Seek Action On Road Work

Members of County Board To Confer with State Roads Commission

Not satisfied with the denial that Western Maryland has been neglected in the "programming" of highway improvement work, members of the board of county commissioners will confer today with the state roads commission in Baltimore in an effort to get action on at least two pending projects.

In an informal discussion of the matter at yesterday morning's session, the commissioners admitted that Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the roads commission, was correct in his statement that Western Maryland had not been neglected in the "programming" of work. But what the commissioners and other citizens of Allegheny and Garrett counties are interested in is "action" on the programming, they said.

The commissioners' visit to the commission office is one in a series planned by various groups to impress on the roads body the need of prompt action on relocating U. S. Route 40 between Cumberland and Frostburg and widening of U. S. Route 220 between Rawlings and McCoolle. Action will also be sought on the proposed new bridge across the Potomac between McCoolle and Keyser.

In addition to meeting with the roads commission, the commissioners will also visit Rosewood Training School to make a check on the Allegheny county patients confined there.

Besides the commissioners—Simeon W. Green, James Holmes and Patrick J. Stakem—the delegation includes James G. Stevenson, clerk to the board, and Walter A. Johnston, county auditor. The group left yesterday afternoon.

J. Frederick Walton Is New Post Chaplain; Membership Drive Captains Chosen

The first definite step toward making a bid for the Maryland Department, American Legion convention, in August, 1942, was taken last evening at the meeting of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, when a committee headed by Robert C. Bowers was appointed to meet with local hotel men for the purpose of working out details for the big event.

Others on the committee in addition to Chairman Bowers are W. Earl Brooks, Harry Spiker, J. Frederick Walton and Vincent P. Ingram, who served as general chairman of the convention committee in 1940.

Taylor Speaks for Hotels

Appearing at last night's meeting, Folsom B. Taylor, manager of the Fort Cumberland hotel and vice-president of the Maryland Hotel Men's Association, spoke in behalf of the hotels regarding the bringing of the convention here.

Taylor admitted that confusion existed at the convention banquet staged last year and agreed that arrangements could be made, if necessary, to hold the banquet in the state armory if the convention comes to Cumberland next year.

Taylor said that the hotel men are willing to expend $5,000 for the convention, provided the cooperation of other organizations is assured. He pointed out that numerous convention banquets are staged in the Fifth Regiment armory, Baltimore.

Details will be worked out at a meeting of hotel managers and the newly appointed Legion committee in the near future.

Walton Named Chaplain

J. Frederick Walton, of Bowling Green, was elected chaplain of the post, succeeding the late Dr. Charles R. McDuffie, who was killed recently when he fell down a flight of stairs. McDuffie served the post as chaplain for ten years and was the only officer of the post to die while holding office.

Walton is chairman of the house committee, served as commander of the local post in 1921 and is also a past chaplain.

Robert C. Bowers, general membership chairman, appointed four team captains for the annual membership campaign which will be inaugurated by the post on Monday, October 20. Captains and teams are John W. Nelson, army; Michael J. L. Brady, navy; W. Earl Brooks, Marines, and Claude L. Deal, air corps.

Bowers and the four captains meet Friday at 8 p. m. in the Legion home to select teams for the drive in which the local post aims to increase its membership twenty-five per cent from the present 413 to 516 members.
